Mr. President
The Dog Believes.
He Should Have Lived.

You need not be a newspaperman all your life to understand the most important fact in newspaper work, and John J. Mitchell, president of the Illinois Merchants' Trust company, proves it.

To his intense surprise, when Victor Lawson died Mr. Mitchell found the Chicago Daily News dropped into his lap with power to do with it as he pleased. This is what he did, according to accounts in the Chicago Daily News office:

He sent for three men upon whom Victor Lawson had relied in his lifetime and said to them:

"I know that a newspaper must rely for success on newspapermen, as banks rely on bankers. If you want my advice, and you ought not to need it, I will give it to you. But I want you to decide what ought to be done, and do it. All I ask of you is to prove to me that Victor Lawson showed good judgment when he made you his chief assistants, and to agree among yourselves."

The New York World dwindled in the hands of Jay Gould; the Herald, Sun, Press, Mail, in New York, and half a dozen other newspapers out of New York, faded away like sickly infants in the hands of Frank Munsey, able business man and financier, but with a lofty intellect and incapable of descending to the humdrum details of newspaper work—in other words, not a newspaper man.

Gould, Munsey and other business men, with newspapers on their hands, might have done much better had they known what John J. Mitchell knows—that it takes a newspaper man to run a newspaper, but it takes a railroad man to run a railroad and a good peanut vendor to run a peanut stand.

President Coolidge, how are you impressed by the testimony of Major Ralph Royce before your air board?

It isn't necessary to ask. Every intelligent American knows your common sense and sound judgment.

But, for the benefit of some newspapers and obsolete military and naval "higher ups" that oppose an independent air force, to publish as widely as possible one part of Major Royce's testimony, as public service, said: "Last year I was inspected by eleven generals, and not one of them

CAILLAUX PLAN IS VOTED DOWN BY "BIG FOUR" AT WASHINGTON

AMERICANS ACT

Reply to French Announcement After White House Visit.

By GEORGE R. HOLMES

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Rejecting in their entirety the terms proposed by Joseph Caillaux, the French finance minister—and terms which the French announced already had been accepted—the American debt commission today submitted a new settlement plan to the French.

Promise Answer at 3 p. m.

The new plan was evolved at a meeting this morning between President Coolidge and four of the American commissioners—Secretaries Mellon, Hoover, Senator Smoot and Representative Crisp—and was submitted to the crestfallen French in a brief, formal meeting at the treasury.

Submission of the fresh plan came after an unprecendented [illegible] and chain of events which admittedly has brought the negotiations to the brink of rupture and failure.

M. Caillaux and his colleagues retired immediately to the embassy to study it and promised to return to the treasury with their answer at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Answer Means Parley's Fate.

There was little doubt at noon today but that on the French answer depends the success or failure of the present negotiations.

Both commissions were in an angry frame of mind this morning because of the rapid and sensational developments that preceded presentation of the new American proposals.

The Americans were angry because

HANLEY SPEAKS AT NOON MEET

Municipal Court is Lawyer's Topic at Kiwanis Luncheon.

"The establishment of a municipal court in East Liverpool means the abolition of 'red tape,' the speeding-up of justice and that the poor man will receive the same kind of treatment as the rich man."

In these words, Attorney J. C. Hanley summed up the benefits of the municipal court which will be established here next January 1, at the noon meeting of the Kiwanis club at the Larkins annex, Market street, today.

Hanley, who is a candidate for judge of the new court at the general election on November 3, pointed out that the excessive costs which ordinarily accompany an attachment suit will be eliminated and that the workman will have an incentive to pay his bills.

"We hear much criticism of the slowness which most courts move," said Hanley. "This new court will speed up the work so that the ordinary case can be settled within three or four weeks after being filed instead of dragging along for months.

Although "Young Bob" is a true son of "Old Bob," he has a mind of his own, and will not follow blindly in his father's steps unless he sees that course as the best one, say friends of Robert M. La Follette, the second, Wisconsin's new senator. Sitting in the seat vacated by his father's death, he will be the senate's youngest member.

Fashion Creations For Fall Are Displayed In Stores

Today, Friday and Saturday are Fall Display Days in East Liverpool.

With more than half a hundred merchants co-operating, the latest creations for fall and winter wear are being exhibited here.

Hundreds of persons, the majority of them women, crowded the downtown streets last evening to view the styles from the show windows. Shades, which have been drawn during the entire week, were raised at 7:30 o'clock.

The windows revealed a hint of the many surprises which are to be found inside the stores. New stocks have been arriving almost daily and never before were local stores so well supplied with selections in all kinds of merchandise.

Black and Gold Popular.

Men's, women's and children's ready-made apparel, dry goods of all kinds, draperies, millinery, footwear, lingerie, household furnishings, etc, are featured in the exhibit.

Judging from the displays, Dame Fashion has decreed that black and gold combinations will be popular. Like the proverbial black cat, black has again made its appearance, but this means black with silver or gold or black with white or black colors.

SOLONS BURY HATCHETS AS THEY VOTE ON FUND TRANSFER

Three Proposals are Adopted Without Debate.

HARMONY RULES

Special Session is Devoid of Verbal Clashes.

Lacking the usual verbal clashes and denunciations of the municipal departments, which have characterized previous sessions, peace reigned supreme, probabaly for the first time in 21 months, at a special meeting of the city solons last night.

Not a dissenting vote was cast on three legislative proposals. The session, however, was brief, adjournment being taken within a half hour after President L. T. Capehart rapped his gavel to order.

The legislation, passed on three readings suspension of the rules, included: a resolution, declaring it necessary to transfer $486.67 from the liquor enforcement fund to the public library fund; an ordinance empowering the library trustees to enter into a contract for the repairing of roof and dome of the building, and an ordinance to appropriate $6,000 from the gasoline tax fund for repairing and maintaing streets and roads.

Money For Street Repairs

The resolution transfering money from the liquor enforcement fund to the library fund was declared to be an emergency measure as was also the ordinance authorizing the library board to enter into a contract for the repair of the roof. Both pieces of legislation became effective upon the signature of Mayor Charles Brown.

Solicitor Harry Brokaw told the solons that the money derived from the two-cent tax on gasoline, returned to the city from the state, could only be used in the repair and maintenance of improved streets and alleys, but

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 1.—Jas. English, Negro, was held here today following his arrest by detectives and United States postal inspectors in connection with a $10,000 mail robbery at Toledo, Ohio, last week.

W. C. Ela, postal inspector, said the Negro stole a package of registered mail at Toledo containing jewelry nad bonds valued at $10,000, most of which, he added, was recovered.

English was scheduled for arraignment before a United States commissioner here today.

NEW SENSATION SPRUNG AS PRESIDENT'S BOARD SEEKS AVIATION FACTS

ASSERTS 50 PER CENT OF PILOTS FAVOR SEPARATE AIR CORPS

Navy Prepares to Fight Back at Col. Mitchell's Charges That "Bungling Amateurs" Were Responsible for Death of 14 Persons Aboard Shenandoah and Failure of Hawiian Flight.

By KENNETH CLARK.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—A new sensation was sprung before the president's board today when Lieut.-Commander R. R. Paunack, of the navy bureau of aeronautics flatly declared that "some naval flyers" were afraid to express their full views on aviation policies because of possible disciplinary action by superiors.

Despite declarations of navy chiefs that naval aviation was functioning smoothly and well, Paunack said that fully 50 per cent of the pilots favored a separate air corps as the best means to develop the air force.

"Have you ever heard naval officers admit that they hesitated to express views for improving the air service?" asked Senator Bingham, (R.) of Connecticut, member of the board.

"Yes, sir," replied Paunack, curtly.

Paunack was the first of a group of naval pilots to testify before the board, which devoted the entire session to listening to their grievances against the present naval air service.

GERMAN DIRIGIBLE EXPERT STANDS PAT ON GAS VALVE SYSTEM CHARGE

LAKEHURST, N. J., Oct. 1.—Captain Anton Heinen, German dirigible expert, and former instructor of the crew of the Shenandoah, today dramatically revealed that Benjamin O. Hereth, mechanician aboard the ill-fated airship, told him the ship had "burst."

"The court is entitled to know all the facts concerning the Shenandoah disaster, said Rear Admiral Jones, president of the naval court of inquiry, before whom Heinen was testifying.

"It is Benjamin Hereth who said the ship burst through internal pressure," Heinen replied. "He gave men the story of the inner conditions of the Shenandoah. I did not solicit it."

LAKEHURST, N. J., Oct. 1.—Captain Anton Heinen, veteran German Zeppelin expert and one-time dirigible instructor to the crew of the ill-fated Shenandoah, continued to instruct his former pupils in airship methods today in resuming his testimony before the naval court of inquiry investigating the disaster.

The witness was severely cross-examined by Lieut. C. E. Rosendahl regarding Heinen's charges that reduction in the gas valve system and the lack of foresight in handling the ship were the two causes for the destruction of the ship.

Amplifying his statement that the Shenandoah could have avoided the storm, Heinen said he had several times in his long experience as an air pilot seen the same danger signs in the weather revealed to the officers

DIVERS RESUME WORK IN ATTEMPT TO RAISE SUNKEN SUBMARINE S-51

NEW LONDON, Conn., Oct. 1.—It was announced shortly after 9 o'clock this morning that the wreckers Monarch and Century had arrived at the scene of the S-51 disaster. Weather conditions were reported as improved.

Divers descended to pass slings under the stern of the derelict preparatory to making another attempt to lift her to the surface.

It developed later that the court of inquiry proceedings, to fix responsibility for the disaster, probably would be held at the local base as soon as Admiral Christy is able to leave the scene of operations. The inquiry originally was scheduled for Boston on or about Oct. 15. It now develops that it will be held as soon as rescue operations are officially abandoned.

Another early development was the fact that neither of the derricks, now attempting to raise the stern of the hulk, have a greater lift than 100 feet while the depth of the ship has been variously estimated as being between 125 and 130 feet. The wreckers, however, will be able to overcome this disadvantage when the time comes, Lieut. Commander E. J. Flanigan said.

"If and when the ship is raised to the 100-foot level, the weight of the craft naturally will decrease as the leverage on it increases," he said. "It is probably that the Century will be permitted to hold the hulk in position, while the Monarch takes another hitch in its lines and then finishes the job."

KELLOGG WARNS AGAINST BOLSHEVISM AND PLEADS FOR RELIGIOUS AND POLITICAL TOLERANCE AT INTER-PARLIAMENTARY UNION'S MEETING

By FRED J. WALKER.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—A solemn warning against Bolshevism, which he inferentially described as one of the greatest problems now faced by democracy, was sounded today by Secretary of State Kellogg at the opening meeting of the Inter-parliamentary union.

Speaking before more than 400 famous legislators from upwards of 40 nations in the chamber of the house of representatives, Kellogg made a plea for religious political tolerance, which he described as in jeopardy throughout the world.

"Representative democracies are today facing as grave problems as at any time within the memory of any man now living. There are forces at work for the disintegration of orderly representative government and for the establishment of class rule which may well give us serious thought," Kellogg said.

"I am not an alarmist and I have absolute confidence in the intelligence and the patriotism of the people of all those nations who have reared and maintained the marvelous institutions of the twentieth century, but I cannot be blind to the forces which are working in many of the self-governing countries for the destruction of really representative government and the establishment of class tyranny."

Kellogg declared that individual liberty must be maintained if democracy is to survive.

"Stability of government, security for the person, the right to labor and enjoy the fruits of industry, protection of property and of equal opportunity are necessary for the highest advancement of the human race," he said.

Touching on the broad aims of the union, Kellogg asserted that the cure for war must come from the "hearts and understanding of the people. Universal peace has been the cry of statesmen for ages, but no one has yet found a specific."

"Arbitration and judicial settlements," he said, "have a conspicuous place and are powerful instruments for peace but there must be more than treaties and conventions. There must be the spirit of tolerence and a willingness to submit to arbitration or judicial settlements."

Secretary Kellogg's action in barring Saklatvala, the Indian communist member of the British parliament, was put directly before the union today by Senator Borah of Idaho, who transmitted a letter from the parsee, denouncing his exclusion. Borah sent the letter without comment for such action as the union cares to take, which, it is said, probably will be none at all.

It developed later that the court of inquiry proceedings, to fix responsibility for the disaster, probably would be held at the local base as soon as Admiral Christy is able to leave the scene of operations. The inquiry originally was scheduled for Boston on or about Oct. 15. It now develops that it will be held as soon as rescue operations are officially abandoned.

Another early development was the fact that neither of the derricks, now attempting to raise the stern of the hulk, have a greater lift than 100 feet while the depth of the ship has been variously estimated as being between 125 and 130 feet. The wreckers, however, will be able to overcome this disadvantage when the time comes, Lieut. Commander E. J. Flanigan said.

"If and when the ship is raised to the 100-foot level, the weight of the craft naturally will decrease as the leverage on it increases," he said. "It is probably that the Century will be permitted to hold the hulk in position, while the Monarch takes another hitch in its lines and then finishes the job."

KELLOGG WARNS AGAINST BOLSHEVISM AND PLEADS FOR RELIGIOUS AND POLITICAL TOLERANCE AT INTER-PARLIAMENTARY UNION'S MEETING

By FRED J. WALKER.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—A solemn warning against Bolshevism, which he inferentially described as one of the greatest problems now faced by democracy, was sounded today by Secretary of State Kellogg at the opening meeting of the Inter-parliamentary union.

Speaking before more than 400 famous legislators from upwards of 40 nations in the chamber of the house of representatives, Kellogg made a plea for religious political tolerance, which he described as in jeopardy throughout the world.

"Representative democracies are today facing as grave problems as at any time within the memory of any man now living. There are forces at work for the disintegration of orderly representative government and for the establishment of class rule which may well give us serious thought," Kellogg said.

"I am not an alarmist and I have absolute confidence in the intelligence and the patriotism of the people of all those nations who have reared and maintained the marvelous institutions of the twentieth century, but I cannot be blind to the forces which are working in many of the self-governing countries for the destruction of really representative government and the establishment of class tyranny."

Kellogg declared that individual liberty must be maintained if democracy is to survive.

"Stability of government, security for the person, the right to labor and enjoy the fruits of industry, protection of property and of equal opportunity are necessary for the highest advancement of the human race," he said.

Touching on the broad aims of the union, Kellogg asserted that the cure for war must come from the "hearts and understanding of the people. Universal peace has been the cry of statesmen for ages, but no one has yet found a specific."

"Arbitration and judicial settlements," he said, "have a conspicuous place and are powerful instruments for peace but there must be more than treaties and conventions. There must be the spirit of tolerence and a willingness to submit to arbitration or judicial settlements."

Secretary Kellogg's action in barring Saklatvala, the Indian communist member of the British parliament, was put directly before the union today by Senator Borah of Idaho, who transmitted a letter from the parsee, denouncing his exclusion. Borah sent the letter without comment for such action as the union cares to take, which, it is said, probably will be none at all.

Mother! Don't "Physic" a Child

DR. CALDWELL AT AGE 83

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it seemed cruel that so many constipated infants and children had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all children's little ills, he did not believe that a sickening "purge" or "physic" every little while was necessary.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which regulates the bowels. A single dose will establish natural, healthy bowel movement for weeks at a time, even if the child was chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but, best of all, it is often months before another dose is necessary. Besides, it is absolutely harmless, and so pleasant that even a cross, feverish, bilious, sick child gladly takes it.

You can dress your hair immediately and it will appear, twice as thick and heavy, an abundance of gleamy, wavy hair, sparkling with life, incomparably soft, fresh, youthful.

Besides beautifying the hair, a 35-cent bottle of refreshing, fragrant "Danderine" from any drug or toilet counter will do wonders, particularly if the hair is dry, thin, brittle, faded or streaked with gray from constant curling and waving which burn the color, lustre and very life from any woman's hair.

"Danderine" acts on the hair like fresh showers of rain and sunshine act on vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates, nourishes and strengthens them, stopping falling hair and helping the hair to grow thick, healthy and luxuriant.

Armour to Teach Women Many Ways To Serve Ham

Again the Review-Tribune has been chosen as the medium for Armour and Company's advertising in this community.

The campaign will be a continuation of the "60 Ways" message which has already earned an enormous popularity in all parts of the country. The idea is to make the advertising render a real service by teaching women the numerous ways of serving Armour's "Star" Ham on occasions of different kinds.

The reason back of the selection of the Review-Tribune for this vital message was because the Review-Tribune reaches the class of readers desired. And, inasmuch as Armour and Company use newspapers to a large extent, they must, naturally, select publications which assure the greatest possible number of returns.

The campaign in the Review-Tribune will be educational to a large extent. It will feature the "60 Ways" idea—and as well, explain to the reader the value of purchasing ham of reputation.

The "60 Ways to Serve" Booklet, several hundred thousand copies of which have been distributed, is free. It can be obtained from local dealers—or will be mailed upon request. A tag is attached to every "Star" Ham for this purpose.

According to Armour and Company, ham is the most popular of all meats. Tastes differ with respect to meats, but everybody seems to like ham—especially, if it is young tender ham with a mild cure flavor. For that reason, every housewife should know a number of ways to serve it; not only for dinner or breakfast, but for luncheons, parties picnics and lighter repasts of all kinds. The "60 Ways" campaign will serve to increase the enjoyment of those who like good ham.

Every dealer will be linked with this campaign as it appears in the Review-Tribune.

Ship's Hard Luck Trip Leads Crew to Belief It Harbored Jonah

CAPE TOWN.—The steamer Port Augustus recently put into Dorban with a tale of so much misfortune that her crew suspect they have a "Jonah" aboard, or, in landlubber's language, one who brings ill-luck to ships.

The vessel carried in the first instance a cargo of china clay bound for America. She had not been at sea more than 24 hours when she encountered a hurricane, and thereafter gale after gale lashed her across the Atlantic. All loose gear was carried away, the stearing gear was smashed, and her crew were deduced to prayer.

Three days later the coal gave out. There was a blinding snow-storm, and planks weer torn from the decks to keep the boilers going and every piece of furniture was used as fuel. After leaving America, a fireman was drowned, and at Wellington, New Zealand, the captain was involved in an automobile smash. At Port Kemble there was bad engine trouble, and a fireman was killed in a fall. Off New South Wales the ship ran into a terrific hurricane, which almost caused her to founder. The last piece of ill-luck occurred when the steamer was nearing Port Said, the bunkers catching fire and only being subdued with difficulty.

Presidential Terms

The Mexican congress is considering the modification of its constitution to allow the re-election of a president for a second term of four years. It is of interest here as well as in Mexico. The problem is the same in both countries, though the background is different.

There is nothing in the United States constitution to prevent the re-election of a president time after time, for life. In practice, however, it has always been avoided, partly by the precedent set by the first president in refusing to be a candidate after his second term, and partly by the fact that the American public usually gets tired of a president after eight years, at the most, and wants a change.

In Mexico the constitutional limitation has mattered little. Presidents have usually held office indefinitely, like Diaz, or been removed by violence without much regard to their official terms. President Obregon was a notable exception in serving his full term and then peacefully yielding to a constitutional successor.

There is much to be said for a second term in either country. Four years is not enough for a good executive, who brings ability to his office and grows in it. And any executive is likely to give more disinterested service in his second term than in the first.

Helping Kids To Marry

Young English couples forbidden to marry by stern parents, or unable to gain legal consent by reason of parental absence now find a helping hand outstretched by the British government.

It is very romantic. Elopers may fly to a sort of fairiy godfather, in the person of Sir Lewis Didbin, officially known as "dean of the arches," residing in the ancient stronghold of Morton Tower. He is empowered to issue marriage licenses at his discretion in the name of the archbishop of Canterbury. It should be a glorious adventure for many a pair of persecuted lovers to seek sanctuary in that tower, where irate parents dare not molest them.

Here is a new kind of governmental paternalism. No such aid is held out for forlorn fledglings over here. Still, they do not seem to have any great difficulty in getting married, no matter what their age or status.

False Fashion News

Bobbed hair, say foreign dispatches, will soon be passe. They're letting the hair grow again in Paris. And that should settle the question for the feminine universe.

Maybe! We seem to remember having read just such wild news as this from abroad for years and years, varied only by reports that New York, next in prestige to Paris, was banning the bobs. And what came of it? Why, the bobs shorter and shorter, and more and more masculine, until it has reached a pass—or possible an impasse—where the only way you can tell whether it's a male or female sitting in the chair ahead is by running the eye down the neck and observing how far the bareness extends.

Same with skirts. Always longer skirts are forecast, and always they get shorter and shorter. Fashion prophecies used to have a 100 per cent rating. Now they are more undependable than weather prophecies. Women are getting out of hand in fashion as in other things.

Service And Profit

Henry Ford, prophesying 100 years of propsperity for America, preaches a sermon.

"The thing we must bear in mind," he says, "is service. The individual should give it in work. Organizations should give it. Service brings prosperity.

"Making money isn't important. Service is. Give service Then you can't help making money."

Mr. Ford preaches an old gospel more convincingly than most men. His parishioners appreciate the fact that he practices what he preaches. He has given service, and he has made more money than anybody else living.

It might be deduced that America will enjoy the promised century of prosperity if it, as a whole, thinks first of service.

The Art of Silence

In an address delivered by Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the Steel Trust, to young people attending a school of commerce, along with some of the customary moralizing of successful business men, are found these two gems:

"The most successful in business are those who have persistently devoted their personal time and attention to the concentration and improvement of one line of activity. In other words, 'Specialize!'"

"The average man talks too much, especially if he has a good command of language. It is well to let the other man talk half the time."

This last statements puts a great truth conservatively. Judge Gary has arrived at his present position of wealth, eminence and power very largely by the process of letting the other man do about 99 per cent of the talking, contenting himself for the most part with a courteous "yes" or "no." He discovered long ago that the less you talk to the other fellow, the more time you have to think about what he is saying, and to see into, around and through him.

Time to get in the winters wood supply and tune up the old radio set.

Mickey (Himself) McGuire— By Fontaine Fox

NEW YORK DAYBYDAY

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Manhattan is finally awakening to horror of its hooch. It has doggedly gone it way drinking what was put before it—and no questions asked. The man who sends back salad because of a wilted lettuce leaf gulped lethal libations in strange blind pigs fearlessly.

Then a drunk hurled a waiter out of a ninth story window. A musician married a girl whose name the next morning he did not remember. A fellow who had two drinks downtown drove his car into a plate glass window to hear the crash. A policeman in his cups entered a strange house and beat up innocent guests.

And the Roaring Forties suddenly became suspicious something was wrong. It has been noticeable for some time that Broadway does not become buoyantly bunned as was its wont in what old timers are pleased to call the good old days.

There is nothing hilarious about drinking. It lapses into a befogging sort of sullenness. It smacks of overdosed dopsters who suddenly go berserk and in their frenzykill. Theatres tell of late arrivals who topple from their seats in what seems to be almost epileptic seizures.

This liquid violence is doled out in what they sell for beer as well as whisky. Men who used to go on a few days spree now and then find the spree lasts several months and they come to in a straight jacket with a fully developed case of the horrors.

Policemen used to be patient with intoxicated stragglers along the byway. Now they approach them with club unsheathed to beat them to the wailop. So many police have been taken by surprise in attack after a friendly warning that they are taking no chances.

In the meanwhile it is reported the water wagon is most popular of all gigs along the White Way. Broadway is sobering because it is frightened. Quite a number of the hotsy-totsy joints are as deserted as Aberdeen on tag dal.

There is the story of a bartender who deserted a piggery and opened across the street to brisk business. The former employer watched the parade of former patrons and tried to drown his sorrow with some of his own liquid cheer.

"Look what I done for him," he said as tears welled. "I took him off a dish washing job made him my bartender, taught him to short-vhange drunks. Now look at him. It ain't right," he broke down in a grand boohoo, "and the Lord just won't let him prosper."

The Vaudeville News, a weekly catering to the tastes of the membership of the N. V. A., has a free want ad department and among the artists seeking engagements are: An English Johnny comedian, a comedian of boob type, an Irish piper, a Rube character, a fast novelty dance team, a straight man singer, a girl violinist and high kicker, a lady trumpet player and a vamp type ingenue.

However, the "at liberty's" and "layoffs" of vaudeville are few. Variety has become the field of all year around engagements what with big and small time circuits and the movie houses that appeal to vaudeville taste.

Landmarks pass. The Academy of Music is making way for the building Moloch. It was the musical center when 14th street was the Rialto and Mrs. August Belmont was the sole social leader. Great artists have appeared at the Academy. Jenny Lind and Patti sang there but of late years the old building has been the home of the cinema. A giant office building will be reared on the site.

Starting during the war when imports from Germany and France were not received, the Spanish top factories now supply four-fifths of the playthings for tots of Spain.

HASKIN'S LETTER

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Air Mail Service Grows.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—It is night on the plains. A whimpering breeze rustles the sage. The stars blink down on the expense beneath them. Somewhere in the murk that joins heaven and earth a coyotee serenades the void. Then silence. Again the whimpering breeze, which grows into a wind, swishing through the sage. It bears with it the sounds of hoofs, a rapid staccato. From the direction of the sound sharp streaks of flame stab the murky night. They are followed, seconds later, by the tardy reports of guns, vainly chasing the light that preceded them.

The staccato comes nearer. The noise of creaking leather mingles with the sound of galloping hoofs. A rider, silhouetted against the heavens, flies past, the fringe on his arms and legs streaming with the wind, the broad brim of his hat blown flat against his forehead. Behind him rides a weird band. Their feathered heads and naked bodies are bent low over their mounts, as if they were part of them. The stacco grows fainter, the streaks of flame disappear into the night, the reports die on the loneliness. Perhaps the band rides back with a grisly trophy hanging on the leader's belt; perhaps it rides back discomfited; perhaps it rides back pursued by many riders like the one that had gone before, or perhaps it does not ride back at all. The rider was the mail carrier of 60 years ago; this was the pony express.

It is night once more on the plains, but at regular intervals lights break through the murk. There is a string of them, stretching thousands of miles, not only on the plains, but across hills, moutains, and rivers. Every 250 miles they revolve like the beacons of lighthouses. The breeze now bears with it a new staccato, more rapid and louder than the hoofs of many years ago. The staccato changes to a roar. Now silhouetted against the heavens is a gigantic bird. Sharp streaks of flame stab from it, but they are not the shots of guns. The roar dies in the night, but the lights continue to revolve. The gigantic bird is the new mail carrier. This is the air mail.

Airman Were Pioneers.

The air mail is an astonishing experiment that has proved itself. Its inception was as adventurous as that of the pony express. There were no red marauders to attack it, but it was dangerous in itself. When those daventurous airmen set sail to transport mail through the air they were as much explorers as Columbus and Eric, as truly pioneers as Boone and Crockett. But they have succeeded, and, although the experiment is far from completion, they have brought San Francisco within 34 hours of New York by mail.

The air mail was established in 1918. It began with a route between Washington and New Yor. It grew and later on independent and disconnected routes between such points as Cleveland and Chicago, New York and Cleveland, Chicago and Omaha, and Chicago and St. Louis, were established. These routes were not long enough to offer any marked advantage over the train in the transportation of mail. The air mail between Washington and New York, for instance, took two hours. It was five hours by train. Then the difficulty encountered in taking off and landing and the time required to truck the mail from the landing fields to post offices made a serious delay. When everything was over the advantage left to the air mail was only one hour. But experience was gained from these short routes which was to prove invaluable.

Followed then the relay system across the continent. The planes flew from station to station across this route by day, and during the night this mail continued in railway mail cars. The aeroplane began to prove its worth to the postal authorities. It operated with an increasing degree of efficiency, until, in the spring of 1922, it had firmly established itself.

Land Lighthouses Established.

The next question to be considered was how to continue the flight of the mail by night. It was found that this could be done and the peril of night flying greatly dissipated by the use of land lighthouses at regular intervals. After much experimentation the postal authorities made a practical application of the idea in two forms, one a large 36-inch arc and searchlight; the other an 18-inch incandescent searchlight.

In each of these two types of lights, the searchlight revolves, its beam shining horizontally, or practically so. They revolve six times a minute. The larger of the two is said to be visible on the ordinary night for more than 150 miles, while the smaller is visible for more than 40 miles. The larger lights are placed at intervals of 250 miles, and the smaller ones at 25-mile intervals. The larger ones are mounted on high, substantial towers, the smaller on ordinary windmill towers, 50 to 60 feet in height.

The big lights are placed on previously established landing fields, while the smaller ones are placed on emergency fields which the Post Office department has been able to rent. These latter are opeerated from independent plants, each of them being in charge of a man whose sole duty is to care, maintain, and operate the light.

Around the fields are border lights, showing the aviator the extent of the grounds he is to land on. There are also, at 3-mile intervals across the air mail route, small, flickering actylene lights, much like those seen on country roads, which shine directly upward and flash at the rate of more than 100 times a minute. These serve to keep the pilot on his route between emergency fields and each of them is placed as near as possible to a suitable landing field in the vicinity.

The air mail system is spreading its lines al over the country. There are eight tentative routes announced upon which bids have been asked: Boston, by Hartford, to New York and return; Chicago, by Indianapolis, Louisville, and Nashville, to Birmingham, and return; Chicago, by LaCrosse, to St. Paul and Minneapolis, and return; Chicago, by Moline, St. Joseph, Kansas City, Wichita, and Oklahoma City, to Dallas and Fort Worth, and return; Chicago, by Springfield, to St. Louis, and reteurn; Kiko, Nevada, by Boise City to Pasco, Washington and return; Salt Lake City, by Las Vegas, Nevada, to Los Angeles and return; Seattle, by Portland and Medford, Oregon, Sacremento, San Francisco, and Bakersfield, to Los Angeles and return.

These were decided upon as striking the salient centers in various sections of the country. New routes will be advertised as soon as petitions are received for them and their feasibility decided upon.

Three-wheeled mail-delivery cars have been put into service by the German Postal Service.

EAST LIVERPOOL — AMERICA'S POTTERY CENTER

Presidential Terms

The Mexican congress is considering the modification of its constitution to allow the re-election of a president for a second term of four years. It is of interest here as well as in Mexico. The problem is the same in both countries, though the background is different.

There is nothing in the United States constitution to prevent the re-election of a president time after time, for life. In practice, however, it has always been avoided, partly by the precedent set by the first president in refusing to be a candidate after his second term, and partly by the fact that the American public usually gets tired of a president after eight years, at the most, and wants a change.

In Mexico the constitutional limitation has mattered little. Presidents have usually held office indefinitely, like Diaz, or been removed by violence without much regard to their official terms. President Obregon was a notable exception in serving his full term and then peacefully yielding to a constitutional successor.

There is much to be said for a second term in either country. Four years is not enough for a good executive, who brings ability to his office and grows in it. And any executive is likely to give more disinterested service in his second term than in the first.

Helping Kids To Marry

Young English couples forbidden to marry by stern parents, or unable to gain legal consent by reason of parental absence now find a helping hand outstretched by the British government.

It is very romantic. Elopers may fly to a sort of fairiy godfather, in the person of Sir Lewis Didbin, officially known as "dean of the arches," residing in the ancient stronghold of Morton Tower. He is empowered to issue marriage licenses at his discretion in the name of the archbishop of Canterbury. It should be a glorious adventure for many a pair of persecuted lovers to seek sanctuary in that tower, where irate parents dare not molest them.

Here is a new kind of governmental paternalism. No such aid is held out for forlorn fledglings over here. Still, they do not seem to have any great difficulty in getting married, no matter what their age or status.

False Fashion News

Bobbed hair, say foreign dispatches, will soon be passe. They're letting the hair grow again in Paris. And that should settle the question for the feminine universe.

Maybe! We seem to remember having read just such wild news as this from abroad for years and years, varied only by reports that New York, next in prestige to Paris, was banning the bobs. And what came of it? Why, the bobs shorter and shorter, and more and more masculine, until it has reached a pass—or possible an impasse—where the only way you can tell whether it's a male or female sitting in the chair ahead is by running the eye down the neck and observing how far the bareness extends.

Same with skirts. Always longer skirts are forecast, and always they get shorter and shorter. Fashion prophecies used to have a 100 per cent rating. Now they are more undependable than weather prophecies. Women are getting out of hand in fashion as in other things.

Service And Profit

Henry Ford, prophesying 100 years of propsperity for America, preaches a sermon.

"The thing we must bear in mind," he says, "is service. The individual should give it in work. Organizations should give it. Service brings prosperity.

"Making money isn't important. Service is. Give service Then you can't help making money."

Mr. Ford preaches an old gospel more convincingly than most men. His parishioners appreciate the fact that he practices what he preaches. He has given service, and he has made more money than anybody else living.

It might be deduced that America will enjoy the promised century of prosperity if it, as a whole, thinks first of service.

The Art of Silence

In an address delivered by Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the Steel Trust, to young people attending a school of commerce, along with some of the customary moralizing of successful business men, are found these two gems:

"The most successful in business are those who have persistently devoted their personal time and attention to the concentration and improvement of one line of activity. In other words, 'Specialize!'-"

"The average man talks too much, especially if he has a good command of language. It is well to let the other man talk half the time."

This last statements puts a great truth conservatively. Judge Gary has arrived at his present position of wealth, eminence and power very largely by the process of letting the other man do about 99 per cent of the talking, contenting himself for the most part with a courteous "yes" or "no." He discovered long ago that the less you talk to the other fellow, the more time you have to think about what he is saying, and to see into, around and through him.

Time to get in the winters wood supply and tune up the old radio set.

NEW YORK DAYBYDAY

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Manhattan is finally awakening to horror of its hooch. It has doggedly gone it way drinking what was put before it—and no questions asked. The man who sends back salad because of a wilted lettuce leaf gulped lethal libations in strange blind pigs fearlessly.

Then a drunk hurled a waiter out of a ninth story window. A musician married a girl whose name the next morning he did not remember. A fellow who had two drinks downtown drove his car into a plate glass window to hear the crash. A policeman in his cups entered a strange house and beat up innocent guests.

And the Roaring Forties suddenly became suspicious something was wrong. It has been noticeable for some time that Broadway does not become buoyantly bunned as was its wont in what old timers are pleased to call the good old days.

There is nothing hilarious about drinking. It lapses into a befogging sort of sullenness. It smacks of overdosed dopsters who suddenly go berserk and in their frenzykill. Theatres tell of late arrivals who topple from their seats in what seems to be almost epileptic seizures.

This liquid violence is doled out in what they sell for beer as well as whisky. Men who used to go on a few days spree now and then find the spree lasts several months and they come to in a straight jacket with a fully developed case of the horrors.

Policemen used to be patient with intoxicated stragglers along the byway. Now they approach them with club unsheathed to beat them to the wailop. So many police have been taken by surprise in attack after a friendly warning that they are taking no chances.

In the meanwhile it is reported the water wagon is most popular of all gigs along the White Way. Broadway is sobering because it is frightened. Quite a number of the hotsy-totsy joints are as deserted as Aberdeen on tag dal.

There is the story of a bartender who deserted a piggery and opened across the street to brisk business. The former employer watched the parade of former patrons and tried to drown his sorrow with some of his own liquid cheer.

"Look what I done for him," he said as tears welled. "I took him off a dish washing job, made him my bartender, taught him to short-vhange drunks. Now look at him. It ain't right," he broke down in a grand boohoo, "and the Lord just won't let him prosper."

The Vaudeville News, a weekly catering to the tastes of the membership of the N. V. A., has a free want ad department and among the artists seeking engagements are: An English Johnny comedian, a comedian of boob type, an Irish piper, a Rube character, a fast novelty dance team, a straight man singer, a girl violinist and high kicker, a lady trumpet player and a vamp type ingenue.

However, the "at liberty's" and "layoffs" of vaudeville are few. Variety has become the field of all year around engagements what with big and small time circuits and the movie houses that appeal to vaudeville taste.

Landmarks pass. The Academy of Music is making way for the building Moloch. It was the musical center when 14th street was the Rialto and Mrs. August Belmont was the sole social leader. Great artists have appeared at the Academy. Jenny Lind and Patti sang there but of late years the old building has been the home of the cinema. A giant office building will be reared on the site.

Starting during the war when imports from Germany and France were not received, the Spanish top factories now supply four-fifths of the playthings for tots of Spain.

HASKIN'S LETTER

Air Mail Service Grows.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—It is night on the plains. A whimpering breeze rustles the sage. The stars blink down on the expense beneath them. Somewhere in the murk that joins heaven and earth a coyotee serenades the void. Then silence. Again the whimpering breeze, which grows into a wind, swishing through the sage. It bears with it the sounds of hoofs, a rapid staccato. From the direction of the sound sharp streaks of flame stab the murky night. They are followed, seconds later, by the tardy reports of guns, vainly chasing the light that preceded them.

The staccato comes nearer. The noise of creaking leather mingles with the sound of galloping hoofs. A rider, silhouetted against the heavens, flies past, the fringe on his arms and legs streaming with the wind, the broad brim of his hat blown flat against his forehead. Behind him rides a weird band. Their feathered heads and naked bodies are bent low over their mounts, as if they were part of them. The stacco grows fainter, the streaks of flame disappear into the night, the reports die on the loneliness. Perhaps the band rides back with a grisly trophy hanging on the leader's belt; perhaps it rides back discomfited; perhaps it rides back pursued by many riders like the one that had gone before, or perhaps it does not ride back at all. The rider was the mail carrier of 60 years ago; this was the pony express.

There is a string of them, stretching thousands of miles, not only on the plains, but across hills, moutains, and rivers. Every 250 miles they revolve like the beacons of lighthouses. The breeze now bears with it a new staccato, more rapid and louder than the hoofs of many years ago. The staccato changes to a roar. Now silhouetted against the heavens is a gigantic bird. Sharp streaks of flame stab from it, but they are not the shots of guns. The roar dies in the night, but the lights continue to revolve. The gigantic bird is the new mail carrier. This is the air mail.

Airman Were Pioneers.

The air mail is an astonishing experiment that has proved itself. Its inception was as adventurous as that of the pony express. There were no red marauders to attack it, but it was dangerous in itself. When those daventurous airmen set sail to transport mail through the air they were as much explorers as Columbus and Eric, as truly pioneers as Boone and Crockett. When everything was over the advantage left to the air mail was only one hour. But experience was gained from these short routes which was to prove invaluable.

The aeroplane began to prove its worth to the postal authorities. It operated with an increasing degree of efficiency, until, in the spring of 1922, it had firmly established itself.

Land Lighthouses Established.

The next question to be considered was how to continue the flight of the mail by night. It was found that this could be done and the peril of night flying greatly dissipated by the use of land lighthouses at regular intervals. After much experimentation the postal authorities made a practical application of the idea in two forms, one a large 36-inch arc and searchlight; the other an 18-inch incandescent searchlight.

The larger lights are placed at intervals of 250 miles, and the smaller ones at 25-mile intervals. The larger ones are mounted on high, substantial towers, the smaller on ordinary windmill towers, 50 to 60 feet in height.

The big lights are placed on previously established landing fields, while the smaller ones are placed on emergency fields which the Post Office department has been able to rent. These latter are opeerated from independent plants, each of them being in charge of a man whose sole duty is to care, maintain, and operate the light.

These serve to keep the pilot on his route between emergency fields and each of them is placed as near as possible to a suitable landing field in the vicinity.

There are eight tentative routes announced upon which bids have been asked: Boston, by Hartford, to New York and return; Chicago, by Indianapolis, Louisville, and Nashville, to Birmingham, and return; Chicago, by LaCrosse, to St. Paul and Minneapolis, and return; Chicago, by Moline, St. Joseph, Kansas City, Wichita, and Oklahoma City, to Dallas and Fort Worth, and return; Chicago, by Springfield, to St. Louis, and reteurn; Kiko, Nevada, by Boise City to Pasco, Washington and return; Salt Lake City, by Las Vegas, Nevada, to Los Angeles and return; Seattle, by Portland and Medford, Oregon, Sacremento, San Francisco, and Bakersfield, to Los Angeles and return.

These were decided upon as striking the salient centers in various sections of the country. New routes will be advertised as soon as petitions are received for them and their fesibility decided upon.

Three-wheeled mail-delivery cars have been put into service by the German Postal Service.

The Story Of A Girl Who Dared

By Edgar Poe Norris

CHAPTER 57.

The first to pay particular attention to the absence of Amoura from the parade in the salon was La Houbierre herself. When, at 1 o'clock she had seen nothing of the mannequin who had in the last two days become a personage in the establishment, she went back to inquire about her. There was no news in the dressing or designing rooms, of course.

"Phone Miss Ainsworth's — Miss Ainsley's apartment. She may be ill," Madame instructed one of the designers, and departed for Marguery's for luncheon.

Two hours later, when Madame returned, after an unusually long chat over food with her friend Marguery, the designer came to her to report: "Miss Ainsworth's apartment did not answer. I inquired at the office, and the housekeeper said she remembered seeing her leave about half past ten."

Madame shrugged. "Perhaps she was called to the theater." Warm with Mousieur Marguery's wine, from his treasured stock of Pol Roger 1911, she went into her study to primp for the afternoon session.

At 4 o'clock she thought of Amoura again. "Call Monsieur Van Pugh," she told her secretary, "and inquire if Miss Ainsworth—Miss Ainsley, I mean, has been at the theater today."

The secretary came back shaking her head. Madame frowned. Had the heiress deserted her? Only yesterday Amoura had told her that she intended to remain at La Houbierre's and Madame had been secretly overjoyed and openly pleased, because of the incidental publicity. Now she began to feel a feminine fear for the safety of her employe.

"Perhaps," she thought aloud, "she has been injured. Possibly knocked down by an auto, and taken to a hospital. Or even killed." Alarmed, she told the secretary to call the police and inquire if an unidentified young woman of Amoura's description had been injured in an accident. She paced the floor while the secretary, Miss Smith, a prim and precise individual, was at the telephone.

"No, Madame, they have no record of an injured person of that description." Miss Smith had a suggestion of her own, "She may have gone riding with one of her gentlemen friends."

La Houbierre regarded the secretary deprecatingly. She didn't see why Amoura should steal off without a word for any reason.

"She probably will appear at the theater this evening," Miss Smith suggested.

La Houbierre shrugged doubtfully. "I suppose so." She went back to her rounds among the patrons.

At 8 o'clock that evening, La Houbierre was called to the telephone. Papa Houbierre, rising courteously, regarded his wife suspiciously as she left the dinner table, and called the maid to him. When Madame was out of hearing, he asked: "Un homme, Marie?"

"Oui, monsieur," Papa Houbierre nodded, and sat down thoughtfully.

Meanwhile La Houbierre was connected with Hans Van Pugh.

"Then you have not seen her, Madame?"

"No, monsieur. She was absent all day. I inquired after her this afternoon, but she was not at her apartment house."

"Nor is she now. My stage manager says he hasn't had a word from her. I told him to send some one out to the apartment.'

"Oh, I'm afraid something has happened to her."

"I'll get in touch with the police."

The august chief of police himself was called from his family fireside by Hans Van Pugh. When he had heard what the producer had to say, he laughed slyly and asked, "Just between you and me, is this sort of a publicity stunt?"

"Absolutely not! As you may have read in the papers, she's the hit of a burlesque scene in my new show, and her unexpected absence smashes it for tonight, just when the show is getting going good. I'm sure, chief, that something has happened to her."

"Allright, I'll look into it."

The chief phoned the captain of the Loop precinct, made a few succinct remarks, and went back to his newspaper and the comic strips.

Twenty minutes later Mill McGargle, police reporter of the Morning American, called his city editor. "Say, Mac, headquarters has a report that the Ainsley girl, the heiress and so forth, who is in Hans Van Pugh's show, is missing. Been gone all day, and wasn't on hand for the performance tonight."

"What is it, Bill, a press agent story?"

"Dunno. Cap got his dope from the chief direct."

"Hm. Well, look around, and see what's in it. What's the News doing?"

"Conny, whose handling headquarters for them tonight, is heavily involved in a poker game, and hasn't got hold of the tip yet."

"Well, hop to it."

The city editor clicked up the receiver and called an office boy. "Son, get the lead out of your legs, and get me all the dope there is in the morgue on—wait." He wrote out the name on a slip of paper. "You're so dumb, son, you'd forget it before you got in there." With that he turned back to the sheath of "copy" before him.

Bill McGargle taxied to Eden Gardens and sought out his friend, Joe Cobbley, press agent extraordinary to Hans Van Pugh. "Out with it, Joe, is this Ainsley disappearance a frame-up? When is she going to have her diamonds stolen?"

Joe scowled. "Frameup hell! We were left flat tonight. Shoved in an untotored girl in her part who proved a fliv, and the burlesque act died, whereas it has been the hit of the show."

"No kidding, Joe?"

"Dammit, Bill, no. That's the straight dope."

"All right. What's your private theory?"

"Damned if I know. I went out to her apartment tonight in a rush. Housekeeper let me in. Clothes and everything there. Also traveling bags. Doesn't look to me like she skipped.

"Well, who'd she go out with last night?" Bill winked.

"There's an idea!" They interviewed the doorkeeper. He remembered faintly having seen a man in a limousine meet her. He had never seen the man before. Couldn't describe him. Didn't remember license number of limousine.

"Probably sleeping off a boozey head," Bill suggested."

"No, not that kind of a girl."

Bill was thoughtful a moment, his curiosity fuming. Perhaps some big local name was involved. Whew, what a scandal story! He went to the telephone and called the editor again. "Say, Mac, Joe Cobbley swears up and down and around again that this Ainsley disappearance isn't a frame-up."

"Gotta hunch?"

"She might be stiff to the gills somewhere, but Joe says she doesn't drink and hasn't any queer friends. Never can tell, she might have been snatched away by some kidnaping fiend." It was a wild thought. "Been a lot in the papers about her money, you know."

"Well, hop on it, Bill. Give the rewrite desk all the dope you've got, and get them to read you what clippings we got. I'll send somebody over to headquarters, and you stick to this and see it out."

So Bill McGargle got on the trail of the missing heiress.

How this rare blend from the old South has become America's largest selling high grade coffee

Years ago the Maxwell House of Nashville, Tennessee, was the most celebrated hotel in the old South. It was the headquarters of notable visitors from all parts of the country—the gathering place of the distinguished men and women of Dixie.

In that land of good living, the fame of its delicious food—and above all its coffee—was carried far and wide. Wherever the guests of the Maxwell House went, they took with them the memory of this coffee—a special blend, remarkably rich and mellow.

And so the demand for Maxwell House Coffee spread to all sections of the United States. Plant after plant—six in all—had to be built to supply it to those critical families who insist upon the finest of everything for their tables.

Today this same blend which first delighted the old South years ago, is the favorite in most of America's leading cities. It has pleased more people than any other coffee ever put on the market.

SURRENDER

The Story Of A Girl Who Dared

By Edgar Doe Norris

CHAPTER 57.

The first to pay particular attention to the absence of Amoura from the parade in the salon was La Houbierre herself. When, at 1 o'clock she had seen nothing of the mannequin who had in the last two days become a personage in the establishment, she went back to inquire about her. There was no news in the dressing or designing rooms, of course.

"Phone Miss Ainsworth's — Miss Ainsley's apartment. She may be ill," Madame instructed one of the designers, and departed for Marguery's for luncheon.

Two hours later, when Madame returned, after an unusually long chat over food with her friend Marguery, the designer came to her to report: "Miss Ainsworth's apartment did not answer. I inquired at the office, and the housekeeper said she remembered seeing her leave about half past ten."

Madame shrugged. "Perhaps she was called to the theater." Warm with Mousieur Marguery's wine, from his treasured stock of Pol Roger 1911, she went into her study to primp for the afternoon session.

At 4 o'clock she thought of Amoura again. "Call Monsieur Van Pugh," she told her secretary, "and inquire if Miss Ainsworth—Miss Ainsley, I mean, has been at the theater today."

The secretary came back shaking her head. Madame frowned. Had the heiress deserted her? Only yesterday Amoura had told her that she intended to remain at La Houbierre's and Madame had been secretly overjoyed and openly pleased, because of the incidental publicity. Now she began to feel a feminine fear for the safety of her employe.

"Perhaps," she thought aloud, "she has been injured. Possibly knocked down by an auto, and taken to a hospital. Or even killed." Alarmed, she told the secretary to call the police and inquire if an unidentified young woman of Amoura's description had been injured in an accident. She paced the floor while the secretary, Miss Smith, a prim and precise individual, was at the telephone.

"No, Madame, they have no record of an injured person of that description." Miss Smith had a suggestion of her own, "She may have gone riding with one of her gentlemen friends."

La Houbierre regarded the secretary deprecatingly. She didn't see why Amoura should steal off without a word for any reason.

"She probably will appear at the theater this evening," Miss Smith suggested.

La Houbierre shrugged doubtfully. "I suppose so." She went back to her rounds among the patrons.

At 8 o'clock that evening, La Houbierre was called to the telephone. Papa Houbierre, rising courteously, regarded his wife suspiciously as she left the dinner table, and called the maid to him. When Madame was out of hearing, he asked: "Un homme, Marie?"

"Oui, monsieur," Papa Houbierre nodded, and sat down thoughtfully.

Meanwhile La Houbierre was connected with Hans Van Pugh.

"Then you have not seen her, Madame?"

"No, monsieur. She was absent all day. I inquired after her this afternoon, but she was not at her apartment house."

"Nor is she now. My stage manager says he hasn't had a word from her. I told him to send some one out to the apartment.'

"Oh, I'm afraid something has happened to her."

"I'll get in touch with the police."

The august chief of police himself was called from his family fireside by Hans Van Pugh. When he had heard what the producer had to say, he laughed slyly and asked, "Just between you and me, is this sort of a publicity stunt?"

"Absolutely not! As you may have read in the papers, she's the hit of a burlesque scene in my new show, and her unexpected absence smashes it for tonight, just when the show is getting going good. I'm sure, chief, that something has happened to her."

"Allright, I'll look into it."

The chief phoned the captain of the Loop precinct, made a few succinct remarks, and went back to his newspaper and the comic strips.

Twenty minutes later Mill McGargle, police reporter of the Morning American, called his city editor. "Say, Mac, headquarters has a report that the Ainsley girl, the heiress and so forth, who is in Hans Van Pugh's show, is missing. Been gone all day, and wasn't on hand for the performance tonight."

EAST LIVERPOOL — AMERICA'S POTTERY CENTER

Presidential Terms

The Mexican congress is considering the modification of its constitution to allow the re-election of a president for a second term of four years. It is of interest here as well as in Mexico. The problem is the same in both countries, though the background is different.

There is nothing in the United States constitution to prevent the re-election of a president time after time, for life. In practice, however, it has always been avoided, partly by the precedent set by the first president in refusing to be a candidate after his second term, and partly by the fact that the American public usually gets tired of a president after eight years, at the most, and wants a change.

In Mexico the constitutional limitation has mattered little. Presidents have usually held office indefinitely, like Diaz, or been removed by violence without much regard to their official terms. President Obregon was a notable exception in serving his full term and then peacefully yielding to a constitutional successor.

There is much to be said for a second term in either country. Four years is not enough for a good executive, who brings ability to his office and grows in it. And any executive is likely to give more disinterested service in his second term than in the first.

Helping Kids To Marry

Young English couples forbidden to marry by stern parents, or unable to gain legal consent by reason of parental absence now find a helping hand outstretched by the British government.

It is very romantic. Elopers may fly to a sort of fairiy godfather, in the person of Sir Lewis Didbin, officially known as "dean of the arches," residing in the ancient stronghold of Morton Tower. He is empowered to issue marriage licenses at his discretion in the name of the archbishop of Canterbury. It should be a glorious adventure for many a pair of persecuted lovers to seek sanctuary in that tower, where irate parents dare not molest them.

Here is a new kind of governmental paternalism. No such aid is held out for forlorn fledglings over here. Still, they do not seem to have any great difficulty in getting married, no matter what their age or status.

False Fashion News

Bobbed hair, say foreign dispatches, will soon be passe. They're letting the hair grow again in Paris. And that should settle the question for the feminine universe.

Maybe! We seem to remember having read just such wild news as this from abroad for years and years, varied only by reports that New York, next in prestige to Paris, was banning the bobs. And what came of it? Why, the bobs shorter and shorter, and more and more masculine, until it has reached a pass—or possible an impasse—where the only way you can tell whether it's a male or female sitting in the chair ahead is by running the eye down the neck and observing how far the bareness extends.

Same with skirts. Always longer skirts are forecast, and always they get shorter and shorter. Fashion prophecies used to have a 100 per cent rating. Now they are more undependable than weather prophecies. Women are getting out of hand in fashion as in other things.

Service And Profit

Henry Ford, prophesying 100 years of propsperity for America, preaches a sermon.

"The thing we must bear in mind," he says, "is service. The individual should give it in work. Organizations should give it. Service brings prosperity.

"Making money isn't important. Service is. Give service Then you can't help making money."

Mr. Ford preaches an old gospel more convincingly than most men. His parishioners appreciate the fact that he practices what he preaches. He has given service, and he has made more money than anybody else living.

It might be deduced that America will enjoy the promised century of prosperity if it, as a whole, thinks first of service.

The Art of Silence

In an address delivered by Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the Steel Trust, to young people attending a school of commerce, along with some of the customary moralizing of successful business men, are found these two gems:

"The most successful in business are those who have persistently devoted their personal time and attention to the concentration and improvement of one line of activity. In other words, 'Specialize!'"

"The average man talks too much, especially if he has a good command of language. It is well to let the other man talk half the time."

This last statements puts a great truth conservatively. Judge Gary has arrived at his present position of wealth, eminence and power very largely by the process of letting the other man do about 99 per cent of the talking, contenting himself for the most part with a courteous "yes" or "no." He discovered long ago that the less you talk to the other fellow, the more time you have to think about what he is saying, and to see into, around and through him.

Time to get in the winters wood supply and tune up the old radio set.

Mickey (Himself) McGuire— By Fontaine Fox

NEW YORK DAYBYDAY

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Manhattan is finally awakening to horror of its hooch. It has doggedly gone it way drinking what was put before it—and no questions asked. The man who sends back salad because of a wilted lettuce leaf gulped lethal libations in strange blind pigs fearlessly.

Then a drunk hurled a waiter out of a ninth story window. A musician married a girl whose name the next morning he did not remember. A fellow who had two drinks downtown drove his car into a plate glass window to hear the crash. A policeman in his cups entered a strange house and beat up innocent guests.

And the Roaring Forties suddenly became suspicious something was wrong. It has been noticeable for some time that Broadway does not become buoyantly bunned as was its wont in what old timers are pleased to call the good old days.

There is nothing hilarious about drinking. It lapses into a befogging sort of sullenness. It smacks of overdosed dopsters who suddenly go berserk and in their frenzykill. Theatres tell of late arrivals who topple from their seats in what seems to be almost epileptic seizures.

This liquid violence is doled out in what they sell for beer as well as whisky. Men who used to go on a few days spree now and then find the spree lasts several months and they come to in a straight jacket with a fully developed case of the horrors.

Policemen used to be patient with intoxicated stragglers along the byway. Now they approach them with club unsheathed to beat them to the wailop. So many police have been taken by surprise in attack after a friendly warning that they are taking no chances.

In the meanwhile it is reported the water wagon is most popular of all gigs along the White Way. Broadway is sobering because it is frightened. Quite a number of the hotsy-totsy joints are as deserted as Aberdeen on tag dal.

There is the story of a bartender who deserted a piggery and opened across the street to brisk business. The former employer watched the parade of former patrons and tried to drown his sorrow with some of his own liquid cheer.

"Look what I done for him," he said as tears welled. "I took him off a dish washing job made him my bartender, taught him to shortvhange drunks. Now look at him. It ain't right," he broke down in a grand boohoo, "and the Lord just won't let him prosper."

The Vaudeville News, a weekly catering to the tastes of the membership of the N. V. A., has a free want ad department and among the artists seeking engagements are: An English Johnny comedian, a comedian of boob type, an Irish piper, a Rube character, a fast novelty dance team, a straight man singer, a girl violinist and high kicker, a lady trumpet player and a vamp type ingenue.

However, the "at liberty's" and "layoffs" of vaudeville are few. Variety has become the field of all year around engagements what with big and small time circuits and the movie houses that appeal to vaudeville taste.

Landmarks pass. The Academy of Music is making way for the building Moloch. It was the musical center when 14th street was the Rialto and Mrs. August Belmont was the sole social leader. Great artists have appeared at the Academy. Jenny Lind and Patti sang there but of late years the old building has been the home of the cinema. A giant office building will be reared on the site.

Starting during the war when imports from Germany and France were not received, the Spanish top factories now supply four-fifths of the playthings for tots of Spain.

HASKIN'S LETTER

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Air Mail Service Grows.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—It is night on the plains. A whimpering breeze rustles the sage. The stars blink down on the expense beneath them. Somewhere in the murk that joins heaven and earth a coyotee serenades the void. Then silence. Again the whimpering breeze, which grows into a wind, swishing through the sage. It bears with it the sounds of hoofs, a rapid staccato. From the direction of the sound sharp streaks of flame stab the murky night. They are followed, seconds later, by the tardy reports of guns, vainly chasing the light that preceded them.

The staccato comes nearer. The noise of creaking leather mingles with the sound of galloping hoofs. A rider, silhouetted against the heavens, flies past, the fringe on his arms and legs streaming with the wind, the broad brim of his hat blown flat against his forehead. Behind him rides a weird band. Their feathered heads and naked bodies are bent low over their mounts, as if they were part of them. The stacco grows fainter, the streaks of flame disappear into the night, the reports die on the loneliness. Perhaps the band rides back with a grisly trophy hanging on the leader's belt; perhaps it rides back discomfited; perhaps it rides back pursued by many riders like the one that had gone before, or perhaps it does not ride back at all. The rider was the mail carrier of 60 years ago; this was the pony express.

It is night once more on the plains, but at regular intervals lights break through the murk. There is a string of them, stretching thousands of miles, not only on the plains, but across hills, moutains, and rivers. Every 250 miles they revolve like the beacons of lighthouses. The breeze now bears with it a new staccato, more rapid and louder than the hoofs of many years ago. The staccato changes to a roar.' Now silhouetted against the heavens is a gigantic bird. Sharp streaks of flame stab from it, but they are not the shots of guns. The roar dies in the night, but the lights continue to revolve. The gigantic bird is the new mail carrier. This is the air mail.

Airman Were Pioneers.

The air mail is an astonishing experiment that has proved itself. Its inception was as adventurous as that of the pony express. There were no red marauders to attack it, but it was dangerous in itself. When those daventurous airmen set sail to transport mail through the air they were as much explorers as Columbus and Eric, as truly pioneers as Boone and Crockett. But they have succeeded, and, although the experiment is far from completion, they have brought San Francisco within 34 hours of New York by mail.

The air mail was established in 1918. It began with a route between Washington and New Yor. It grew and later on independent and disconnected routes between such points as Cleveland and Chicago, New York and Cleveland, Chicago and Omaha, and Chicago and St. Louis, were established. These routes were not long enough to offer any marked advantage over the train in the transportation of mail. The air mail between Washington and New York, for instance, took two hours. It was five hours by train. Then the difficulty encountered in taking off and landing and the time required to truck the mail from the landing fields to post offices made a serious delay. When everything was over the advantage left to the air mail was only one hour. But experience was gained from these short routes which was to prove invaluable.

Followed then the relay system across the continent. The planes flew from station to station across this route by day, and during the night this mail continued in railway mail cars. The aeroplane began to prove its worth to the postal authorities. It operated with an increasing degree of efficiency, until, in the spring of 1922, it had firmly established itself.

Land Lighthouses Established.

The next question to be considered was how to continue the flight of the mail by night. It was found that this could be done and the peril of night flying greatly dissipated by the use of land lighthouses at regular intervals. After much experimentation the postal authorities made a practical application of the idea in two forms, one a large 36-inch arc and searchlight; the other an 18-inch incandescent searchlight.

In each of these two types of lights, the searchlight revolves, its beam shining horizontally, or practically so. They revolve six times a minute. The larger of the two is said to be visible on the ordinary night for more than 150 miles, while the smaller is visible for more than 40 miles. The larger lights are placed at intervals of 250 miles, and the smaller ones at 25-mile intervals. The larger ones are mounted on high, substantial towers, the smaller on ordinary windmill towers, 50 to 60 feet in height.

The big lights are placed on previously established landing fields, while the smaller ones are placed on emergency fields which the Post Office department has been able to rent. These latter are opeerated from independent plants, each of them being in charge of a man whose sole duty is to care, maintain, and operate the light.

Around the fields are border lights, showing the aviator the extent of the grounds he is to land on. There are also, at 3-mile intervals across the air mail route, small, flickering actylene lights, much like those seen on country roads, which shine directly upward and flash at the rate of more than 100 times a minute. These serve to keep the pilot on his route between emergency fields and each of them is placed as near as possible to a suitable landing field in the vicinity.

The air mail system is spreading its lines al over the country. There are eight tentative routes announced upon which bids have been asked: Boston, by Hartford, to New York and return; Chicago, by Indianapolis, Louisville, and Nashville, to Birmingham, and return; Chicago, by LaCrosse, to St. Paul and Minneapolis, and return; Chicago, by Moline, St. Joseph, Kansas City, Wichita, and Oklahoma City, to Dallas and Fort Worth, and return; Chicago, by Springfield, to St. Louis, and reteurn; Kiko, Nevada, by Boise City to Pasco, Washington and return; Salt Lake City, by Las Vegas, Nevada, to Los Angeles and return; Seattle, by Portland and Medford, Oregon, Sacremento, San Francisco, and Bakersfield, to Los Angeles and return.

These were decided upon as striking the salient centers in various sections of the country. New routes will be advertised as soon as petitions are received for them and their feasibility decided upon.

EAST LIVERPOOL — AMERICA'S POTTERY CENTER

Presidential Terms

The Mexican congress is considering the modification of its constitution to allow the re-election of a president for a second term of four years. It is of interest here as well as in Mexico. The problem is the same in both countries, though the background is different.

There is nothing in the United States constitution to prevent the re-election of a president time after time, for life. In practice, however, it has always been avoided, partly by the precedent set by the first president in refusing to be a candidate after his second term, and partly by the fact that the American public usually gets tired of a president after eight years, at the most, and wants a change.

In Mexico the constitutional limitation has mattered little. Presidents have usually held office indefinitely, like Diaz, or been removed by violence without much regard to their official terms. President Obregon was a notable exception in serving his full term and then peacefully yielding to a constitutional successor.

There is much to be said for a second term in either country. Four years is not enough for a good executive, who brings ability to his office and grows in it. And any executive is likely to give more disinterested service in his second term than in the first.

Helping Kids To Marry

Young English couples forbidden to marry by stern parents, or unable to gain legal consent by reason of parental absence now find a helping hand outstretched by the British government.

It is very romantic. Elopers may fly to a sort of fairiy godfather, in the person of Sir Lewis Didbin, officially known as "dean of the arches," residing in the ancient stronghold of Morton Tower. He is empowered to issue marriage licenses at his discretion in the name of the archbishop of Canterbury. It should be a glorious adventure for many a pair of persecuted lovers to seek sanctuary in that tower, where irate parents dare not molest them.

Here is a new kind of governmental paternalism. No such aid is held out for forlorn fledglings over here. Still, they do not seem to have any great difficulty in getting married, no matter what their age or status.

False Fashion News

Bobbed hair, say foreign dispatches, will soon be passe. They're letting the hair grow again in Paris. And that should settle the question for the feminine universe.

Maybe! We seem to remember having read just such wild news as this from abroad for years and years, varied only by reports that New York, next in prestige to Paris, was banning the bobs. And what came of it? Why, the bobs shorter and shorter, and more and more masculine, until it has reached a pass—or possible an impasse—where the only way you can tell whether it's a male or female sitting in the chair ahead is by running the eye down the neck and observing how far the bareness extends.

Same with skirts. Always longer skirts are forecast, and always they get shorter and shorter. Fashion prophecies used to have a 100 per cent rating. Now they are more undependable than weather prophecies. Women are getting out of hand in fashion as in other things.

Service And Profit

Henry Ford, prophesying 100 years of propsperity for America, preaches a sermon.

"The thing we must bear in mind," he says, "is service. The individual should give it in work. Organizations should give it. Service brings prosperity.

"Making money isn't important. Service is. Give service Then you can't help making money."

Mr. Ford preaches an old gospel more convincingly than most men. His parishioners appreciate the fact that he practices what he preaches. He has given service, and he has made more money than anybody else living.

It might be deduced that America will enjoy the promised century of prosperity if it, as a whole, thinks first of service.

The Art of Silence

In an address delivered by Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the Steel Trust, to young people attending a school of commerce, along with some of the customary moralizing of successful business men, are found these two gems:

"The most successful in business are those who have persistently devoted their personal time and attention to the concentration and improvement of one line of activity. In other words, 'Specialize!'-"

"The average man talks too much, especially if he has a good command of language. It is well to let the other man talk half the time."

This last statements puts a great truth conservatively. Judge Gary has arrived at his present position of wealth, eminence and power very largely by the process of letting the other man do about 99 per cent of the talking, contenting himself for the most part with a courteous "yes" or "no." He discovered long ago that the less you talk to the other fellow, the more time you have to think about what he is saying, and to see into, around and through him.

Time to get in the winters wood supply and tune up the old radio set.

NEW YORK DAYBYDAY

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Manhattan is finally awakening to horror of its hooch. It has doggedly gone it way drinking what was put before it—and no questions asked. The man who sends back salad because of a wilted lettuce leaf gulped lethal libations in strange blind pigs fearlessly.

Then a drunk hurled a waiter out of a ninth story window. A musician married a girl whose name the next morning he did not remember. A fellow who had two drinks downtown drove his car into a plate glass window to hear the crash. A policeman in his cups entered a strange house and beat up innocent guests.

And the Roaring Forties suddenly became suspicious something was wrong. It has been noticeable for some time that Broadway does not become buoyantly bunned as was its wont in what old timers are pleased to call the good old days.

There is nothing hilarious about drinking. It lapses into a befogging sort of sullenness. It smacks of overdosed dopsters who suddenly go berserk and in their frenzykill. Theatres tell of late arrivals who topple from their seats in what seems to be almost epileptic seizures.

This liquid violence is doled out in what they sell for beer as well as whisky. Men who used to go on a few days spree now and then find the spree lasts several months and they come to in a straight jacket with a fully developed case of the horrors.

Policemen used to be patient with intoxicated stragglers along the byway. Now they approach them with club unsheathed to beat them to the wailop. So many police have been taken by surprise in attack after a friendly warning that they are taking no chances.

In the meanwhile it is reported the water wagon is most popular of all gigs along the White Way. Broadway is sobering because it is frightened. Quite a number of the hotsy-totsy joints are as deserted as Aberdeen on tag dal.

There is the story of a bartender who deserted a piggery and opened across the street to brisk business. The former employer watched the parade of former patrons and tried to drown his sorrow with some of his own liquid cheer.

"Look what I done for him," he said as tears welled. "I took him off a dish washing job, made him my bartender, taught him to shortvhange drunks. Now look at him. It ain't right," he broke down in a grand boohoo, "and the Lord just won't let him prosper."

The Vaudeville News, a weekly catering to the tastes of the membership of the N. V. A., has a free want ad department and among the artists seeking engagements are: An English Johnny comedian, a comedian of boob type, an Irish piper, a Rube character, a fast novelty dance team, a straight man singer, a girl violinist and high kicker, a lady trumpet player and a vamp type ingenue.

However, the "at liberty's" and "layoffs" of vaudeville are few. Variety has become the field of all year around engagements what with big and small time circuits and the movie houses that appeal to vaudeville taste.

Landmarks pass. The Academy of Music is making way for the building Moloch. It was the musical center when 14th street was the Rialto and Mrs. August Belmont was the sole social leader. Great artists have appeared at the Academy. Jenny Lind and Patti sang there but of late years the old building has been the home of the cinema. A giant office building will be reared on the site.

Starting during the war when imports from Germany and France were not received, the Spanish top factories now supply four-fifths of the playthings for tots of Spain.

HASKIN'S LETTER

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Air Mail Service Grows.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—It is night on the plains. A whimpering breeze rustles the sage. The stars blink down on the expense beneath them. Somewhere in the murk that joins heaven and earth a coyotee serenades the void. Then silence. Again the whimpering breeze, which grows into a wind, swishing through the sage. It bears with it the sounds of hoofs, a rapid staccato. From the direction of the sound sharp streaks of flame stab the murky night. They are followed, seconds later, by the tardy reports of guns, vainly chasing the light that preceded them.

The staccato comes nearer. The noise of creaking leather mingles with the sound of galloping hoofs. A rider, silhouetted against the heavens, flies past, the fringe on his arms and legs streaming with the wind, the broad brim of his hat blown flat against his forehead. Behind him rides a weird band. Their feathered heads and naked bodies are bent low over their mounts, as if they were part of them. The stacco grows fainter, the streaks of flame disappear into the night, the reports die on the loneliness. Perhaps the band rides back with a grisly trophy hanging on the leader's belt; perhaps it rides back discomfited; perhaps it rides back pursued by many riders like the one that had gone before, or perhaps it does not ride back at all. The rider was the mail carrier of 60 years ago; this was the pony express.

It is night once more on the plains, but at regular intervals lights break through the murk. There is a string of them, stretching thousands of miles, not only on the plains, but across hills, moutains, and rivers. Every 250 miles they revolve like the beacons of lighthouses. The breeze now bears with it a new staccato, more rapid and louder than the hoofs of many years ago. The staccato changes to a roar. Now silhouetted against the heavens is a gigantic bird. Sharp streaks of flame stab from it, but they are not the shots of guns. The roar dies in the night, but the lights continue to revolve. The gigantic bird is the new mail carrier. This is the air mail.

Airman Were Pioneers.

The air mail is an astonishing experiment that has proved itself. Its inception was as adventurous as that of the pony express. There were no red marauders to attack it, but it was dangerous in itself. When those daventurous airmen set sail to transport mail through the air they were as much explorers as Columbus and Eric, as truly pioneers as Boone and Crockett. But they have succeeded, and, although the experiment is far from completion, they have brought San Francisco within 34 hours of New York by mail.

The air mail was established in 1918. It began with a route between Washington and New Yor. It grew and later on independent and disconnected routes between such points as Cleveland and Chicago, New York and Cleveland, Chicago and Omaha, and Chicago and St. Louis, were established. These routes were not long enough to offer any marked advantage over the train in the transportation of mail. The air mail between Washington and New York, for instance, took two hours. It was five hours by train. Then the difficulty encountered in taking off and landing and the time required to truck the mail from the landing fields to post offices made a serious delay. When everything was over the advantage left to the air mail was only one hour. But experience was gained from these short routes which was to prove invaluable.

Followed then the relay system across the continent. The planes flew from station to station across this route by day, and during the night this mail continued in railway mail cars. The aeroplane began to prove its worth to the postal authorities. It operated with an increasing degree of efficiency, until, in the spring of 1922, it had firmly established itself.

Land Lighthouses Established.

The next question to be considered was how to continue the flight of the mail by night. It was found that this could be done and the peril of night flying greatly dissipated by the use of land lighthouses at regular intervals. After much experimentation the postal authorities made a practical application of the idea in two forms, one a large 36-inch arc and searchlight; the other an 18-inch incandescent searchlight.

In each of these two types of lights, the searchlight revolves, its beam shining horizontally, or practically so. They revolve six times a minute. The larger of the two is said to be visible on the ordinary night for more than 150 miles, while the smaller is visible for more than 40 miles. The larger lights are placed at intervals of 250 miles, and the smaller ones at 25-mile intervals. The larger ones are mounted on high, substantial towers, the smaller on ordinary windmill towers, 50 to 60 feet in height.

The big lights are placed on previously established landing fields, while the smaller ones are placed on emergency fields which the Post Office department has been able to rent. These latter are opeerated from independent plants, each of them being in charge of a man whose sole duty is to care, maintain, and operate the light.

Around the fields are border lights, showing the aviator the extent of the grounds he is to land on. There are also, at 3-mile intervals across the air mail route, small, flickering actylene lights, much like those seen on country roads, which shine directly upward and flash at the rate of more than 100 times a minute. These serve to keep the pilot on his route between emergency fields and each of them is placed as near as possible to a suitable landing field in the vicinity.

The air mail system is spreading its lines al over the country. There are eight tentative routes announced upon which bids have been asked: Boston, by Hartford, to New York and return; Chicago, by Indianapolis, Louisville, and Nashville, to Birmingham, and return; Chicago, by LaCrosse, to St. Paul and Minneapolis, and return; Chicago, by Moline, St. Joseph, Kansas City, Wichita, and Oklahoma City, to Dallas and Fort Worth, and return; Chicago, by Springfield, to St. Louis, and reteurn; Klko, Nevada, by Boise City to Pasco, Washington and return; Salt Lake City, by Las Vegas, Nevada, to Los Angeles and return; Seattle, by Portland and Medford, Oregon, Sacremento, San Francisco, and Bakersfield, to Los Angeles and return.

These were decided upon as striking the salient centers in various sections of the country. New routes will be advertised as soon as petitions are received for them and their feasibility decided upon.

Three-wheeled mail-delivery cars have been put into service by the German Postal Service.

White spun Angora rabbit hair is to be introduced into this country by a French firm.

The Story Of A Girl Who Dared

By Edgar Poe Norris

CHAPTER 57.

The first to pay particular attention to the absence of Amoura from the parade in the salon was La Houbierre herself. When, at 1 o'clock she had seen nothing of the mannequin who had in the last two days become a personage in the establishment, she went back to inquire about her. There was no news in the dressing or designing rooms, of course.

"Phone Miss Ainsworth's — Miss Ainsley's apartment. She may be ill," Madame instructed one of the designers, and departed for Marguery's for luncheon.

Two hours later, when Madame returned, after an unusually long chat over food with her friend Marguery, the designer came to her to report: "Miss Ainsworth's apartment did not answer. I inquired at the office, and the housekeeper said she remembered seeing her leave about half past ten."

Madame shrugged. "Perhaps she was called to the theater." Warm with Monsieur Marguery's wine, from his treasured stock of Pol Roger 1911, she went into her study to primp for the afternoon session.

At 4 o'clock she thought of Amoura again. "Call Monsieur Van Pugh," she told her secretary, "and inquire if Miss Ainsworth—Miss Ainsley, I mean, has been at the theater today."

The secretary came back shaking her head. Madame frowned. Had the heiress deserted her? Only yesterday Amoura had told her that she intended to remain at La Houbierre's and Madame had been secretly overjoyed and openly pleased, because of the incidental publicity. Now she began to feel a feminine fear for the safety of her employe.

"Perhaps," she thought aloud, "she has been injured. Possibly knocked down by an auto, and taken to a hospital. Or even killed." Alarmed, she told the secretary to call the police and inquire if an unidentified young woman of Amoura's description had been injured in an accident. She paced the floor while the secretary, Miss Smith, a prim and precise individual, was at the telephone.

"No, Madame, they have no record of an injured person of that description." Miss Smith had a suggestion of her own, "She may have gone riding with one of her gentlemen friends."

La Houbierre regarded the secretary deprecatingly. She didn't see why Amoura should steal off without a word for any reason.

"She probably will appear at the theater this evening," Miss Smith suggested.

La Houbierre shrugged doubtfully. "I suppose so." She went back to her rounds among the patrons.

At 8 o'clock that evening, La Houbierre was called to the telephone. Papa Houbierre, rising courteously, regarded his wife suspiciously as she left the dinner table, and called the maid to him. When Madame was out of hearing, he asked: "Un homme, Marie?"

"Oui, monsieur," Papa Houbierre nodded, and sat down thoughtfully.

Meanwhile La Houbierre was connected with Hans Van Pugh.

"Then you have not seen her, Madame?"

"No, monsieur. She was absent all day. I inquired after her this afternoon, but she was not at her apartment house."

"Nor is she now. My stage manager says he hasn't had a word from her. I told him to send some one out to the apartment.'

"Oh, I'm afraid something has happened to her."

"I'll get in touch with the police."

The august chief of police himself was called from his family fireside by Hans Van Pugh. When he had heard what the producer had to say, he laughed slyly and asked, "Just between you and me, is this sort of a publicity stunt?"

"Absolutely not! As you may have read in the papers, she's the hit of a burlesque scene in my new show, and her unexpected absence smashes it for tonight, just when the show is getting going good. I'm sure, chief, that something has happened to her."

"Allright, I'll look into it."

The chief phoned the captain of the Loop precinct, made a few succinct remarks, and went back to his newspaper and the comic strips.

Twenty minutes later Mill McGargle, police reporter of the Morning American, called his city editor. "Say, Mac, headquarters has a report that the Ainsley girl, the heiress and so forth, who is in Hans Van Pugh's show, is missing. Been gone all day, and wasn't on hand for the performance tonight."

"What is it, Bill, a press agent story?"

"Dunno. Cap got his dope from the chief direct."

"Hm. Well, look around, and see what's in it. What's the News doing?"

"Conny, whose handling headquarters for them tonight, is heavily involved in a poker game, and hasn't got hold of the tip yet."

"Well, hop to it."

The city editor clicked up the receiver and called an office boy. "Son, get the lead out of your legs, and get me all the dope there is in the morgue on—wait." He wrote out the name on a slip of paper. "You're so dumb, son, you'd forget it before you got in there." With that he turned back to the sheath of "copy" before him.

Bill McGargle taxied to Eden Gardens and sought out his friend, Joe Cobbley, press agent extraordinary to Hans Van Pugh. "Out with it, Joe, is this Ainsley disappearance a frameup? When is she going to have her diamonds stolen?"

Joe scowled. "Frameup hell! We were left flat tonight. Shoved in an untotored girl in her part who proved a fliv, and the burlesque act died, whereas it has been the hit of the show."

"No kidding, Joe?"

"Dammit, Bill, no. That's the straight dope."

"All right. What's your private theory?"

"Damned if I know. I went out to her apartment tonight in a rush. Housekeeper let me in. Clothes and everything there. Also traveling bags. Doesn't look to me like she skipped.

"Well, who'd she go out with last night?" Bill winked.

"There's an idea!" They interviewed the doorkeeper. He remembered faintly having seen a man in a limousine meet her. He had never seen the man before. Couldn't describe him. Didn't remember license number of limousine.

"Probably sleeping off a boozey head," Bill suggested."

"No, not that kind of a girl."

Bill was thoughtful a moment, his curiosity fuming. Perhaps some big local name was involved. Whew, what a scandal story! He went to the telephone and called the editor again. "Say, Mac, Joe Cobbley swears up and down and around again that this Ainsley disappearance isn't a frame-up."

"Gotta hunch?"

"She might be stiff to the gills somewhere, but Joe says she doesn't drink and hasn't any queer friends. Never can tell, she might have been snatched away by some kidnaping fiend." It was a wild thought. "Been a lot in the papers about her money, you know."

"Well, hop on it, Bill. Give the rewrite desk all the dope you've got, and get them to read you what clippings we got. I'll send somebody over to headquarters, and you stick to this and see it out."

So Bill McGargle got on the trail of the missing heiress.

How this rare blend from the old South has become America's largest selling high grade coffee

Years ago the Maxwell House of Nashville, Tennessee, was the most celebrated hotel in the old South. It was the headquarters of notable visitors from all parts of the country—the gathering place of the distinguished men and women of Dixie.

In that land of good living, the fame of its delicious food—and above all its coffee—was carried far and wide. Wherever the guests of the Maxwell House went, they took with them the memory of this coffee—a special blend, remarkably rich and mellow.

And so the demand for Maxwell House Coffee spread to all sections of the United States. Plant after plant—six in all—had to be built to supply it to those critical families who insist upon the finest of everything for their tables.

Today this same blend which first delighted the old South years ago, is the favorite in most of America's leading cities. It has pleased more people than any other coffee ever put on the market.

When you first enjoy its mellow smoothness, its rich fragrance, you will understand why it has become America's largest selling high grade coffee. Serve it for breakfast—tomorrow! Ask your grocer for one of the blue tins of Maxwell House Coffee. Cheek-Neal Coffee Company, Nashville, Houston, Jacksonville, Richmond, New York, Los Angeles.

SURRENDER

The Story Of A Girl Who Dared

By Edgar Poe Norris

CHAPTER 57.

The first to pay particular attention to the absence of Amoura from the parade in the salon was La Houbierre herself. When, at 1 o'clock she had seen nothing of the mannequin who had in the last two days become a personage in the establishment, she went back to inquire about her. There was no news in the dressing or designing rooms, of course.

"Phone Miss Ainsworth's — Miss Ainsley's apartment. She may be ill," Madame instructed one of the designers, and departed for Marguery's for luncheon.

Two hours later, when Madame returned, after an unusually long chat over food with her friend Marguery, the designer came to her to report: "Miss Ainsworth's apartment did not answer. I inquired at the office, and the housekeeper said she remembered seeing her leave about half past ten."

Madame shrugged. "Perhaps she was called to the theater." Warm with Monsieur Marguery's wine, from his treasured stock of Pol Roger 1911, she went into her study to primp for the afternoon session.

At 4 o'clock she thought of Amoura again. "Call Monsieur Van Pugh," she told her secretary, "and inquire if Miss Ainsworth—Miss Ainsley, I mean, has been at the theater today."

The secretary came back shaking her head. Madame frowned. Had the heiress deserted her? Only yesterday Amoura had told her that she intended to remain at La Houbierre's and Madame had been secretly overjoyed and openly pleased, because of the incidental publicity. Now she began to feel a feminine fear for the safety of her employe.

"Perhaps," she thought aloud, "she has been injured. Possibly knocked down by an auto, and taken to a hospital. Or even killed." Alarmed, she told the secretary to call the police and inquire if an unidentified young woman of Amoura's description had been injured in an accident. She paced the floor while the secretary, Miss Smith, a prim and precise individual, was at the telephone.

"No, Madame, they have no record of an injured person of that description." Miss Smith had a suggestion of her own, "She may have gone riding with one of her gentlemen friends."

La Houbierre regarded the secretary deprecatingly. She didn't see why Amoura should steal off without a word for any reason.

"She probably will appear at the theater this evening," Miss Smith suggested.

La Houbierre shrugged doubtfully. "I suppose so." She went back to her rounds among the patrons.

At 8 o'clock that evening, La Houbierre was called to the telephone. Papa Houbierre, rising courteously, regarded his wife suspiciously as she left the dinner table, and called the maid to him. When Madame was out of hearing, he asked: "Un homme, Marie?"

"Oui, monsieur," Papa Houbierre nodded, and sat down thoughtfully.

Meanwhile La Houbierre was connected with Hans Van Pugh.

"Then you have not seen her, Madame?"

"No, monsieur. She was absent all day. I inquired after her this afternoon, but she was not at her apartment house."

"Nor is she now. My stage manager says he hasn't had a word from her. I told him to send some one out to the apartment.'

"Oh, I'm afraid something has happened to her."

"I'll get in touch with the police."

The august chief of police himself was called from his family fireside by Hans Van Pugh. When he had heard what the producer had to say, he laughed slyly and asked, "Just between you and me, is this sort of a publicity stunt?"

"Absolutely not! As you may have read in the papers, she's the hit of a burlesque scene in my new show, and her unexpected absence smashes it for tonight, just when the show is getting going good. I'm sure, chief, that something has happened to her."

"Allright, I'll look into it."

The chief phoned the captain of the Loop precinct, made a few succinct remarks, and went back to his newspaper and the comic strips.

Twenty minutes later Mill McGargle, police reporter of the Morning American, called his city editor. "Say, Mac, headquarters has a report that the Ainsley girl, the heiress and so forth, who is in Hans Van Pugh's show, is missing. Been gone all day, and wasn't on hand for the performance tonight."

"What is it, Bill, a press agent story?"

"Dunno. Cap got his dope from the chief direct."

"Hm. Well, look around, and see what's in it. What's the News doing?"

"Conny, whose handling headquarters for them tonight, is heavily involved in a poker game, and hasn't got hold of the tip yet."

"Well, hop to it."

The city editor clicked up the receiver and called an office boy. "Son, get the lead out of your legs, and get me all the dope there is in the morgue on—wait." He wrote out the name on a slip of paper. "You're so dumb, son, you'd forget it before you got in there." With that he turned back to the sheath of "copy" before him.

Bill McGargle taxied to Eden Gardens and sought out his friend, Joe Cobbley, press agent extraordinary to Hans Van Pugh. "Out with it, Joe, is this Ainsley disappearance a frame-up? When is she going to have her diamonds stolen?"

Joe scowled. "Frameup hell! We were left flat tonight. Shoved in an untotored girl in her part who proved a fliv, and the burlesque act died, whereas it has been the hit of the show."

"No kidding, Joe?"

"Dammit, Bill, no. That's the straight dope."

"All right. What's your private theory?"

"Damned if I know. I went out to her apartment tonight in a rush. Housekeeper let me in. Clothes and everything there. Also traveling bags. Doesn't look to me like she skipped.

"Well, who'd she go out with last night?" Bill winked.

"There's an idea!" They interviewed the doorkeeper. He remembered faintly having seen a man in a limousine meet her. He had never seen the man before. Couldn't describe him. Didn't remember license number of limousine.

"Probably sleeping off a boozey head," Bill suggested."

"No, not that kind of a girl."

Bill was thoughtful a moment, his curiosity fuming. Perhaps some big local name was involved. Whew, what a scandal story! He went to the telephone and called the editor again. "Say, Mac, Joe Cobbley swears up and down and around again that this Ainsley disappearance isn't a frame-up."

"Gotta hunch?"

"She might be stiff to the gills somewhere, but Joe says she doesn't drink and hasn't any queer friends. Never can tell, she might have been snatched away by some kidnaping fiend." It was a wild thought. "Been a lot in the papers about her money, you know."

"Well, hop on it, Bill. Give the rewrite desk all the dope you've got, and get them to read you what clippings we got. I'll send somebody over to headquarters, and you stick to this and see it out."

So Bill McGargle got on the trail of the missing heiress.

Corn Kept Her Awake Like a Toothache Till Her Sister Told This Remedy

Miss Josie Sansbury, 810 Prospect St., Indianapolis, told the reporter her experience as follows:

"I had a corn that pained like a toothache. I would wake up in the night from the pain. Then my sister told me to be sure and get some 'Blue-jay' Corn Plasters, for she had used them with such success.

"I put on 'Blue-jay', and 24 hours after soaked the plaster off and the corn came right out. That was over a year ago, and I haven't had a corn since. I have recommended them to many of my friends and everyone who tried them says the plasters removed their corns."

Anyone who will follow the simple directions on the package can get instant relief and in two days be rid of the corn.

Liquid corn remedies cannot keep the pressure of the shoe off the corn as "Blue-jay" Plasters do. And you can stretch the soft-felt "Blue-jay" Plaster pad to fit around any sized corn. It's attached to an adhesive strip that holds it right on the corn. Hence the "Blue-jay" preparation centered in the pad goes right to the right spot and nowhere else.

The dose is ready measured—not too much, not too little—to remove the corn. You can never be sure of the right amount in dropping a liquid on a corn. So we recommend "Blue-jay" Plasters in preference to any liquid, even our own. Demand is so great all druggists carry "Blue-jay." Package of six only 25c.

Turk-Nash Sales Co. Will Introduce New Ajax Car Here

Announcement was made today by officials of the Ajax Motors company, Racine, Wis., Nash Motors subsidiary, that the new Ajax will be formally introduced to the East Liverpool public in the near future. "Seldom in the history of the industry has the arrival of a new motor car been awaited with the eagerness that characterizes local interest in the coming of the Ajax. And if the record-breaking enthusiasm manifested in the cities near the home factory where it is now on exhibition is any criterion then the Ajax unveiling here will draw the greatest crowds that ever flocked to see a new car," states Turk-Nash Sales company, East Liverpool Ajax distributors.

"Opinion throughout the industry and among those who have had opportunity to view the car in those towns adjacent to the factory where it is on display unhesitatingly pronounces the new Ajax the crowning achievement of C. W. Nash. It is said to be a car of such highly developed character in respect to both body design and engineering features that it will take rank at once as a contribution to motor car progress of distinct and vital importance.

"In order to give the Ajax every advantage of the finest production facilities the entire Ajax plant was completely remodeled to conform to the latest accepted ideas for fine motor car manufacture and all the equipment, tools and mechanical devices were bought new and they are of the most modern character available. Everything considered probably no car has ever made its bow to buyers under more auspicious circumstances nor with brighter outlook for achieving a tremendous popular success."

Macon, Georgia.—"During the Change of Life I suffered with my whole right side and could not lie on my left side. I was in bed about two months and could not get up only as my son would lift me. 'DEATH VALLEY' SCOTT BOBS UP

Mystery Man of Mojave is Worth $2,000,000.

LOS ANGELES — "Death Valley" Walter Scott, mystery man of the Mojave, California desert who 20 years ago chartered and himself piloted a special train to Chicago from the coast in the record time of 44 hours and a few minutes is back today at his home in the drifting sands, following his first visit to Los Angeles in seven years.

And in his wake Scott left a more mysterious trail than ever.

For he came to the city with all his pockets bulging with big bills, as he did 20 years ago.

When "Death Valley" Scott visited Los Angeles in 1905 and chartered his famous special train he had $120,000 with him. The train cost $19,000 and Scott squandered the balance during his Eastern visit.

Scott admitted he has today $2,000,000 in property holdings adding "but one such stunt as I pulled in 1905 is enough in any man's lifetime."

Scott's fortune comes from some spot near his desert home.

Just how he makes his money no one knows but year after year he has added to his fortune and his wealth is said to be almost limitless.

At present Scott is building a million-dollar residence. The home is now about two-thirds finished according to Scott, and is built entirely of concrete and steel.

A chimney 330 feet tall, was leveled by exploding dynamite at the base, in Darford, England, recently.

Turk-Nash Sales Co. Will Introduce New Ajax Car Here

Announcement was made today by officials of the Ajax Motors company, Racine, Wis., Nash Motors subsidiary, that the new Ajax will be formally introduced to the East Liverpool public in the near future. "Seldom in the history of the industry has the arrival of a new motor car been awaited with the eagerness that characterizes local interest in the coming of the Ajax. And if the record-breaking enthusiasm manifested in the cities near the home factory where it is now on exhibition is any criterion then the Ajax unveiling here will draw the greatest crowds that ever flocked to see a new car," states Turk-Nash Sales company, East Liverpool Ajax distributors.

"Opinion throughout the industry and among those who have had opportunity to view the car in those towns adjacent to the factory where it is on display unhesitatingly pronounces the new Ajax the crowning achievement of C. W. Nash. It is said to be a car of such highly developed character in respect to both body design and engineering features that it will take rank at once as a contribution to motor car progress of distinct and vital importance.

"In order to give the Ajax every advantage of the finest production facilities the entire Ajax plant was completely remodeled to conform to the latest accepted ideas for fine motor car manufacture and all the equipment, tools and mechanical devices were bought new and they are of the most modern character available. Everything considered probably no car has ever made its bow to buyers under more auspicious circumstances nor with brighter outlook for achieving a tremendous popular success."

'DEATH VALLEY' SCOTT BOBS UP

Mystery Man of Mojave is Worth $2,000,000.

LOS ANGELES — "Death Valley" Walter Scott, mystery man of the Mojave, California desert who 20 years ago chartered and himself piloted a special train to Chicago from the coast in the record time of 44 hours and a few minutes is back today at his home in the drifting sands, following his first visit to Los Angeles in seven years.

And in his wake Scott left a more mysterious trail than ever.

For he came to the city with all his pockets bulging with big bills, as he did 20 years ago.

When "Death Valley" Scott visited Los Angeles in 1905 and chartered his famous special train he had $120,000 with him. The train cost $10,000 and Scott squandered the balance during his Eastern visit.

Scott admitted he has today $2,000,000 in property holdings adding "but one such stunt as I pulled in 1905 is enough in any man's lifetime."

Scott's fortune comes from some spot near his desert home.

Just how he makes his money no one knows but year after year he has added to his fortune and his wealth is said to be almost limitless.

At present Scott is building a million-dollar residence. The home is now about two-thirds finished according to Scott, and is built entirely of concrete and steel.

A chimney 330 feet tall, was leveled by exploding dynamite at the base, in Darford, England, recently.

To counteract sea-sickness special moving pictures are to be shown on liners.

Corn Kept Her Awake Like a Toothache Till Her Sister Told This Remedy

Miss Josie Sansbury, 810 Prospect St., Indianapolis, told the reporter her experience as follows:

"I had a corn that pained like a toothache. I would wake up in the night from the pain. Then my sister told me to be sure and get some 'Blue-jay' Corn Plasters, for she had used them with such success.

"I put on 'Blue-jay', and 24 hours after soaked the plaster off and the corn came right out. That was over a year ago, and I haven't had a corn since. I have recommended them to many of my friends and everyone who tried them says the plasters removed their corns."

Anyone who will follow the simple directions on the package can get instant relief and in two days be rid of the corn.

Liquid corn remedies cannot keep the pressure of the shoe off the corn as "Blue-jay" Plasters do. And you can stretch the soft-felt "Blue-jay" Plaster pad to fit around any sized corn. It's attached to an adhesive strip that holds it right on the corn. Hence the "Blue-jay" preparation centered in the pad goes right to the right spot and nowhere else.

The dose is ready measured—not too much, not too little—to remove the corn. You can never be sure of the right amount in dropping a liquid on a corn. So we recommend "Blue-jay" Plasters in preference to any liquid, even our own. Demand is so great all druggists carry "Blue-jay." Package of six only 25c.

TIRE COMPANY IS BANKRUPT

Appraisers Visit East End Plant to Fix Value.

The plant of the Pittsburgh Rubber company, East End, against which a petition in involuntary bankruptcy was filed in the U. S. district court at Cleveland about ten days ago; is being appraised today.

The appraisers are H. A. Middleton, former head of the McLean Tire & Rubber company, which operated the plant for several years; E. H. Cunningham and C. E. Kidder.

The plant, which was built about 12 years ago by the Morgan & Marshall Tire and Rubber company, was taken over last May by W. S. and G. B. Thomas, brothers, of Wooster, who organized the Pittsburgh Tire & Rubber company. It was leased from the bondholders who bought it from C. V. Beatty, receiver for the McLean Tire & Rubber company about a year ago.

The company ceased operations on Saturday, Sept. 5. Five trucks owned by a Pittsburgh firm came to the plant on Labor day and removed all the finished tires and unfinished stock. About 25 or 30 employes who had not been paid filed attachment proceedings against the company on the following Tuesday when the plant failed to resume operations.

Attorney Blaine H. Cochran of this city has been named by the United States district court as receiver for the company.

BRAZIL COPES WITH UPRISING

Rebels Invade Rio Grande Do Sul, Capture Town.

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 1.—A small band of rebels has invaded the Brazilian state of Rio Grande Do Sul, coming down from the mountains and capturing the town of Toreo Rinhas, according to reports reaching here by way of Uruguay.

The rebels number 3,000 and are reported to be in complete control of Toreo Rinhas, cutting off communication between that town and Santa Anna.

LONDON, Oct. 1—Brazil has a small but vigorous armed uprising to cope with, according to messages from Montevieds, Uruguay today.

Three hundred armed revolutionists invaded the state of Rio Grande Do Sul, according to the messages, coming down from the mountains, capturing the town of Toreo Rinhas and cutting off communications from this district to Santa Anna.

"The municipal court will have final jurisdiction over misdemeanor cases, and will have the same jurisdiction in felony cases as the mayor and justices of the peace now have. The law requires that a person charged with a felony must be indicted by the grand jury.

"Eighty per cent of the damage cases filed at Lisbon involve claims of $1,000 or less. These can be settled in East Liverpool after the first of the year, as the new court will have jurisdiction in claims up to $1,500. The new court in East Liverpool will eliminate the necessity of a second judge of the common pleas court at Lisbon."

About 65 members of the club and their guests attended the meeting. Music was directed by Prof. H. F. Laughlin. Dr. George Lewis, club president, presided. The attendance prize, a fountain pen, furnished by Wharfmaster Ross Tisher, was won by Attorney W. B. Hill.

"Are you familiar with the storm that destroyed the Shenandoah?" Lieut. Rosendahl asked.

"I am," replied Heinen. "The most significant testimony of Lieut. Anderson, aerological officer aboard the Shenandoah was when he said he saw the weather going against the wind direction. He was describing one of the concrete danger signs we airmen know of. What Anderson saw was the one sign feared by airmen."

Lieut. Anderson testified he advised Commander Lansdowne to change his course but the commander persisted to his original route.

TODAY

ever even looked at my airplane. They were interested only in the clothing of the enlisted men, in saluting, and the cleanliness of my kitchen and barracks."

Mr. President and readers generally what would you think of eleven generals, responsible for the welfare of a graet express train, if they confined themselves to inspecting the uniforms of Pullman conductors or porters, and the cleanliness of the dining car, and never asked a question about the locomotive.

This nation needs an air force controlled by men that understand flying, men that are interested in the differnce btween an all metal monoplane and a weak cloth made biplane, more than in neat uniforms, or servile saluting.

Providence, taking care of the birds, put in charge of them the brains of birds, not the brains of rabbits or turtles.

Why should this nation, depending for its --- in war, upon flying machines and flying men, put the nation's flying department under the control of human rabbits from the navy or turtles from the army?

Not far from the train on which this is written in Arkansas City, Kans., there lives a dog, name unknown, and all the rest of his life that dog will believe in mircales.

His owner, probably dead by this time, was Warren Hardy, man of quick temper. Seizing his shotgun by the end of the barrel, Hardy hit the dog with the butt. Neither he nor the dog, knew the gun was loaded. Hardy is in the hospital, and probably won't recover.

All in one second the dog felt the blow, heard the explosion, saw his cruel master stretched on the ground, knowing nothing about gunpowder. That dog will always believe in miracles, and also in a special providence that avenges dogs, when they are hit with the butt end of a gun.

It is foolish, however, to say the less you understand the more readly you believe in miracles.

The radio is a genuine mircale of science, and it takes intelligence to understand it. A savage wouldn't understand it or believe in it. He would simply say "witchcraft" and go his way.

Arch Brownley wrote an admirably brief notice, pinned it to the front door of his little restaurant at Fort Smith, Arkansas, went to the back room, drank poison and died.

The farewell notice read:

"I am dead. This store will not be open today."

Too bad he died. He should have gone into the newspaper business. A dozen editorial chairs need men able to write briefly and to the point as Arch Brownley wrote in his forty-second and last year.

Fashion Display Opens

touch of gold or silver is quite new and correct, fashion leaders assert.

Silver or gold leather is being used as a trim for sport suits, velvet ensemble and evening dresses. Bands of cut out leather trim, charming velvet frocks and coats, and there could be nothing more beautiful than Veronese green velvet trimmed with silver applique in exquisite pattern.

Long Narrow Sleeves.

The fad of short sleeves or even no sleevees at all in dresses has been disregarded this year for the long narrow sleeve or those with puffs from the elbow to the wrist. Skirts, which will continue to remain short, will be flared. Among the many pretty shades are brown, wine, mulberry and cranberry. The latest names for the blues will be cracklehead and pencil.

Gold and silver tassels sometimes trim velvet and satin dresses in the darker shades with a touch of gold on the sleeve. In the jaunty afternoon frocks graded bands of silver or gold leather are used in the trim.

Differing from the small hats worn last year, millinery shops are featuring the style turned back from the face with colors matching those of the garment.

Jewels, furs and accessories are also presented for the most fastidious women, as well as fabrics for those who have skill in designing their own costumes.

Fares Are Refunded.

Sport coats for fall wear are straight and in color resemble the well known Navajo blanket. These coats are replacing those of creton which were popular for summer and early fall wear.

The Fall Display campaign is under auspices of the Retail Merchants' division of the Chamber of Commerce, which is making an extraordinary effort to have shoppers residing within a radius of 15 miles visit here during this big event.

The Fare Refunding association will refund fares to all out-of-town shoppers who comes to East Liverpool during any of the three days of the show.

TURKS PREPARE FOR FRESH WAR

Defy England in Dispute Over Mosul Question.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—War clouds gathered over the Near East today, with four classes of Turkish recruits, from the age of 22 to 25 called for military service, according to a message from Constantinople, and the semi-official Turkish press boldly flaunting defiance of England over the hotly disputed Mosul question.

Although the Turkish newspapers were quoted as saying the call to arms was for the purpose of national defense in the event of an attack on Turkish soil, they followed this explanation with the declaration:

"Turkey will not stand by with her arms folded and permit England to acquire Mosul for the benefit of her petrol kings."

U. S. Makes New Offer

of the premature announcement by the French that Secretary Mellon and M. Caillaux had agreed tentatively upon an extremely lenient settlement for France, which awaited only the approval of President Coolidge to be formally ratified and reduced to writing.

The French were angry because of the position they were put in by a remarkable statement issued at the White House, which not only contradicted flatly what the French had announced 12 hours before, but went even further and barely stopped short of accusing the French of duplicity.

Deny French Announcement.

The French announced last night that a tentative agreement had been reached between M. Caillaux and Mr. Mellon ,under which France was to fund her debt on an easy payment plan of 68 years, paying $40 000,000 for the first five years, $60,000,000 for the next seven years, and a flat $100,000,000 annually for the next 56 years, the whole to bear an interest rate approximating 1⅛ per cent.

The American statement denied this flatly and declared that no agreement had been reached and contained the remarkable assertion that "there have been no differences of opinion among the members of the American commission."

The emptiness of the American statement saying that "there were no differences of opinion whatever" among the American commissioners was strikingly illustrated within two hours after the commission left the White House, when one of the commissioners said:

"President Coolidge is standing squarely behind the majority of this commission."

"Is there a majority where no difference of opinion exists?" the commissioner was asked.

"Yes, just that," he snapped.

Places Hopes in Coolidge

PARIS, Oct. 1.—France places its hopes in President Coolidge to prevent a breakdown in the Franco-American debt negotiations.

"We have faith in President Coolidge who is alone the master of the situation," said an official of the finance ministry today, in a statement to International News Service, commenting on the impasse in negotiations which threatens in Washington.

New Sensation

The navy prepared to fight back today at Colonel "Billy" Mitchell's charges that "bungling amateurs" were responsible for the death of 14 persons in the Shenandoah disaster, and for the failure of the Hawaiian flight and the Arctic expedition.

The battle to clear the navy of this grave accusation was to be opened by a select list of the country's best naval pilots and airplane constructors.

There were more than 15 pilots in the list called by the board, which included Commander John Rodgers, who drew Mitchell's fire because of the unsuccessful PN-9 Honolulu flight; Captain George Steele, Commandant of the Lakehurst naval dirigible station; men who planned the navy's Arctic expedition, and members of the crew of the NC-4, first plane ever to fly across the Atlantic.

Chicagoan Named Head of National Safety Congress

CLEVELAND, Oct. 1.—Charles B. Scott, Chicago, head of the Chicago Bureau of Public Safety, was elected president of the National Safety Congress in convention here to succeed C. B. Auel, Pittsburgh.

The fourth day of the five-day safety study, was taken up today with sessions on industrial and public safety.

Carl R. Gray, president of the Union Pacific system, Omaha, Neb., who came here to participate in the safety discussions of the steam rail group, made the principal talk at last night's banquet. He surprised his listeners with some amazing vital statistics of his own board. He said, "In 1920 there were 3,120 persons killed in accidents on our roads alone. Thus far in 1925 only 271 persons have been killed on the Union Pacific."

29 Persons Known Dead in Japan's 36-Hour Rainfall

TOKIO, Oct. 1.—Twenty-nine known dead were listed by Japanese newspapers today as the toll of the 36-hour rain just ended and the resultant floods and landslides. No foreigners were endangered, according to reports.

Innumerable landslides wrecked houses and blocked railway and tramway tracks. Thousands of Japanese houses were flooded.

The broad-casting station at Tokio, one of the finest in Japan, was reported in danger of failing as the result of a landslide threatening its foundation.

The deaths listed were: Tokio, 3; Yokusaka, 6; Yokohama, 20.

Negro is Sentenced To Die in Electric Chair for Murder

CINCINNATI, Oct. 1.—The brutal slaying of Edna Boswell, 14-year-old Addyston school girl, committed September 16 by James Henry, 37, a Negro from Georgia, was legally avenged today. Late yesterday afternoon after the speediest murder hearing on record in Hamilton county, Henry was sentenced to death by Judges F. L. Hoffman, and S. A. Leblond. January 9, 1926, was the date set for the execution.

The sentence was passed after the two jurists had heard all of the testimony in the case, including a graphic description of the crime by the slayer who demonstrated how he had crushed the girl's skull with a sharp pointed stone after robbing her of her money.

Palmer Stripped Of Executive Power By Shipping Board

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Leigh C. Palmer, president of the Emergency Fleet corporation and central figure in the government's shipping controversy, virtually was stripped of all executive powers today by the United States shipping board.

The board by an unanimous vote repealed two resolutions, enacted a year ago, which had given Palmer authority to operate the government's fleet of merchant vessels without the board's supervision. The authority had been conferred on Palmer at President Coolidge's request.

Spanish Troops Occupy Heights of Adrar and Seddun

With a terricif artillery drum-fire preceding them, Spanish infantry forces aree continuing their advance toward Ajdir.

The fall of Ajdir, once the stronghold of general headquarters of Abd-El-Krim, is believed to be imminent.

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Selling pressure on the motor stocks resulted in a lower level of prices for many of the active stocks in the early trading today, but recoveries were in order almost immediately, while stocks in other sections of the market forged ahead at the opening.

Dodge Brothers' spurt to a new high at 31¾, up 2½ points, was the feature of the low-priced motor stocks, while Marland's leadership of the oils into higher price territory, and North American company's advance to above 59 emphasized the buoyant tone of the oil and utility stocks.

The unexpected reduction of the Bank of England's discount rate from 4½ to 4 per cent emphasized the firm situation in international money markets. Operations of the United States Steel corporation's mills were reported at 80 per cent of capacity, against 76 per cent last week, and prices of steel bars were firm at 2 cents a pound.

Early losses of from 1 to 3 points were easily made up as the whole market surged forward in the first hour, in response to the more favorable outlook in the money situation. Dodge Brothers' common stock ran away from hte balance of the motor list, and transactions were unusually heavy.

Marland's oil movement gained momentum as the session advanced, and reached a new high on the movement at 46 in heavy trading. Fleischmann sold above 126, a new high for the year. Railway Steel Springs jumped 8 points to 178.

Call money renewed at 5½ per cent.

that council must first adopt legislation appropriating this money.

The solicitor also notified the solons that the ordinance for the construction of a sanitary sewer in Hazel street would be ready for passage at the next meeting. All legislation for the Edgewood avenue sewer has been enacted, and the work on both streets will be let in the same contract.

Settle Pole Controversy

Frank Swaney, commercial manager for the Ohio Bell Telephone company, attended a caucus session of the solons, held before their open session, to discuss the proposed removal of the telephone pole which stands at the corner of Mulberry street and Pennsylvania avenue in front of the Ohio Valley Oil company's new filling station. Council expressed a desire at some time to make this curb round in which event it would be necessary to move the pole.

Swaney informed the lawmakers that his company stood ready to change the location of the pole at any time that council decided to go ahead with the improvement. This wrote finis to the controversy.

Uncle Sam Loses First Round Against Tax-Dodgers' Army

Government Collects $4,162,998 in Delinquent Taxes, But Refunds $11,137,000 Because of Illegal Assessment.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—In the first round of a nation-wide battle between taxpayers and the federal government, by which the bureau of internal revenue hopes to put 20,000,000 or more tax-dodgers on the books, the treasury took a bad beating.

Figures for August, made public today, showed that $4,162,998 had been collected in delinquent taxes against $11,137,000 refunded to taxpayers because of illegal assessment.

From June 30 to October 1, the treasury made tax refunds of over $48,000,000 compared to $39,816,000 for the same period last year.

At that rate the proceeds from all foreign debts this year will not make the refunds authorized to taxpayers by the bureau of internal revenue. Some of the refunds have been approved at the treasury and others ordered by the United States board of tax appeals and the federal courts.

"Hard-boiled" methods will be employed to collect delinquent tax, according to officials.

Deputy internal revenue collectors made 45,845 investigations resulting in additional tax of $4,854,000 in August. The collection amounted to $4,162,998.

"In many case taxpayers cannot pay in full, in which case it is necessary to enter warrants for distraint, levy upon personal property and in other ways protect the interests of the government," Blair said.

"The number of delinquents who did not make returns was 23,830, of whom 9,698 were income tax delinquents and 14,142 delinquent in the payment of miscellaneous taxes."

Most of the taxpayers referred to are of the small variety.

The number of income tax delinquents and additional collections included:

TIRE COMPANY IS BANKRUPT

Appraisers Visit East End Plant to Fix Value.

The plant of the Pittsburgh Rubber company, East End, against which a petition in involuntary bankruptcy was filed in the U. S. district court at Cleveland about ten days ago, is being appraised today.

The appraisers are H. A. Middleton, former head of the McLean Tire & Rubber company, which operated the plant for several years; E. H. Cunningham and C. E. Kidder.

The plant, which was built about 12 years ago by the Morgan & Marshall Tire and Rubber company, was taken over last May by W. S. and G. B. Thomas, brothers, of Wooster, who organized the Pittsburgh Tire & Rubber company. It was leased from the bondholders who bought it from C. V. Beatty, receiver for the McLean Tire & Rubber company about a year ago.

The company ceased operations on Saturday, Sept. 5. Five trucks owned by a Pittsburgh firm came to the plant on Labor day and removed all the finished tires and unfinished stock. About 25 or 30 employes who had not been paid filed attachment proceedings against the company on the following Tuesday when the plant failed to resume operations.

Attorney Blaine H. Cochran of this city has been named by the United States district court as receiver for the company.

BRAZIL COPES WITH UPRISING

Rebels Invade Rio Grande Do Sul, Capture Town.

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 1.—A small band of rebels has invaded the Brazilian state of Rio Grande Do Sul, coming down from the mountains and capturing the town of Toreo Rinhas, according to reports reaching here by way of Uruguay.

The rebels number 3,000 and are reported to be in complete control of Toreo Rinhas, cutting off communication between that town and Santa Anna.

LONDON, Oct. 1—Brazil has a small but vigorous armed uprising to cope with, according to messages from Montevieda, Uruguay today.

Three hundred armed revolutionists invaded the state of Rio Grande Do Sul, according to the messages, coming down from the mountains, capturing the town of Toreo Rinhas and cutting off communications from this district to Santa Anna.

"The municipal court will have final jurisdiction over misdemeanor cases, and will have the same jurisdiction in felony cases as the mayor and justices of the peace now have. The law requires that a person charged with a felony must be indicted by the grand jury.

"Eighty per cent of the damage cases filed at Lisbon involve claims of $1,000 or less. These can be settled in East Liverpool after the first of the year, as the new court will have jurisdiction in claims up to $1,500. The new court in East Liverpool will eliminate the necessity of a second judge of the common pleas court at Lisbon."

About 65 members of the club and their guests attended the meeting. Music was directed by Prof. H. F. Laughlin. Dr. George Lewis, club president, presided. The attendance prize, a fountain pen, furnished by Wharfmaster Ross Tisher, was won by Attorney W. B. Hill.

Three vocal selections were given by Miss Mabel Hill, soprano, with Miss Bess Adams as accompanist.

"Are you familiar with the storm that destroyed the Shenandoah?" Lieut. Rosendahl asked.

"I am," replied Heinen. "The most significant testimony of Lieut. Anderson, aerological officer aboard the Shenandoah was when he said he saw the weather going against the wind direction. He was describing one of the concrete danger signs we airmen know of. What Anderson saw was the one sign feared by airmen."

Lieut. Anderson testified he advised Commander Lansdowne to change his course but the commander persisted to his original route.

TODAY

ever even looked at my airplane. They were interested only in the clothing of the enlisted men, in saluting, and the cleanliness of my kitchen and barracks."

Mr. President and readers generally what would you think of eleven generals, responsible for the welfare of a graet express train, if they confined themselves to inspecting the uniforms of Pullman conductors or porters, and the cleanliness of the dining car, and never asked a question about the locomotive.

This nation needs an air force controlled by men that understand flying, men that are interested in the difference btween an all metal monoplane and a weak cloth made biplane, more than in neat uniforms, or servile saluting.

Providence, taking care of the birds, put in charge of them the brains of birds, not the brains of rabbits or turtles.

Why should this nation, depending for its ——— in war, upon flying machines and flying men, put the nation's flying department under the control of human rabbits from the navy or turtles from the army?

Not far from the train on which this is written in Arkansas City, Kans., there lives a dog, name unknown, and all the rest of his life that dog will believe in mircales.

His owner, probably dead by this time, was Warren Hardy, man of quick temper. Seizing his shotgun by the end of the barrel, Hardy hit the dog with the butt. Neither he nor the dog knew the gun was loaded. Hardy is in the hospital, and probably won't recover.

All in one second the dog felt the blow, heard the explosion, saw his cruel master stretched on the ground, knowing nothing about gunpowder. That dog will always believe in miracles, and also in a special providence that avenges dogs, when they are hit with the butt end of a gun.

It is foolish, however, to say the less you understand the more readly you believe in miracles.

The radio is a genuine mircale of science, and it takes intelligence to understand it. A savage wouldn't understand it or believe in it. He would simply say "witchcraft" and go his way.

Arch Brownley wrote an admirably brief notice, pinned it to the front door of his little restaurant at Fort Smith, Arkansas, went to the back room, drank poison and died.

The farewell notice read:

"I am dead. This store will not be open today."

Too bad he died. He should have gone into the newspaper business. A dozen editorial chairs need men able to write briefly and to the point as Arch Brownley wrote in his forty-second and last year.

Fashion Display Opens

touch of gold or silver is quite new and correct, fashion leaders assert.

Silver or gold leather is being used as a trim for sport suits, velvet ensemble and evening dresses. Bands of cut out leather trim, charming velvet frocks and coats, and there could be nothing more beautiful than Veronese green velvet trimmed with silver applique in exquisite pattern.

Long Narrow Sleeves.

The fad of short sleeves or even no sleevees at all in dresses has been disregarded this year for the long narrow sleeve or those with puffs from the elbow to the wrist. Skirts, which will continue to remain short, will be flared. Among the many pretty shades are brown, wine, mulberry and cranberry. The latest names for the blues will be cracklehead and pencil.

Gold and silver tassels sometimes trim velvet and satin dresses in the darker shades with a touch of gold on the sleeve. In the jaunty afternoon frocks graded bands of silver or gold leather are used in the trim.

Differing from the small hats worn last year, millinery shops are featuring the style turned back from the face with colors matching those of the garment.

Jewels, furs and accessories are also presented for the most fastidious women, as well as fabrics for those who have skill in designing their own costumes.

Fares Are Refunded.

Sport coats for fall wear are straight and in color resemble the well known Navajo blanket. These coats are replacing those of creton which were popular for summer and early fall wear.

The Fall Display campaign is under auspices of the Retail Merchants' division of the Chamber of Commerce, which is making an extraordinary effort to have shoppers residing within a radius of 15 miles visit here during this big event.

The Fare Refunding association will refund fares to all out-of-town shoppers who comes to East Liverpool during any of the three days of the show.

TURKS PREPARE FOR FRESH WAR

Defy England in Dispute Over Mosul Question.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—War clouds gathered over the Near East today, with four classes of Turkish recruits, from the age of 22 to 25 called for military service, according to a message from Constantinople, and the semi-official Turkish press boldly flaunting defiance of England over the hotly disputed Mosul question.

Although the Turkish newspapers were quoted as saying the call to arms was for the purpose of national defense in the event of an attack on Turkish soil, they followed this explanation with the declaration: of the premature announcement by the French that Secretary Mellon and M. Caillaux had agreed tentatively upon an extremely lenient settlement for France, which awaited only the approval of President Coolidge to be formally ratified and reduced to writing.

"Turkey will not stand by with her arms folded and permit England to acquire Mosul for the benefit of her petrol kings."

The French were angry because of the position they were put in by a remarkable statement issued at the White House, which not only contradicted flatly what the French had announced 12 hours before, but went even further and barely stopped short of accusing the French of duplicity.

Deny French Announcement.

The French announced last night that a tentative agreement had been reached between M. Caillaux and Mr. Mellon ,under which France was to fund her debt on an easy payment plan of 68 years, paying $40 000,000 for the first five years, $60,000,000 for the next seven years, and a flat $100,000,000 annually for the next 56 years, the whole to bear an interest rate approximating 1½ per cent.

The American statement denied this flatly and declared that no agreement had been reached and contained the remarkable assertion that "there have been no differences of opinion among the members of the American commission."

The emptiness of the American statement saying that "there were no differences of opinion whatever" among the American commissioners was strikingly illustrated within two hours after the commission left the White House, when one of the commissioners said:

"President Coolidge is standing squarely behind the majority of this commission."

"Is there a majority where no difference of opinion exists?" the commissioner was asked.

"Yes, just that," he snapped.

Places Hopes in Coolidge

PARIS, Oct. 1.—France places its hopes in President Coolidge to prevent a breakdown in the Franco-American debt negotiations.

"We have faith in President Coolidge who is alone the master of the situation," said an official of the finance ministry today, in a statement to International News Service, commenting on the impasse in negotiations which threatens in Washington.

The navy prepared to fight back today at Colonel "Billy" Mitchell's charges that "bungling amateurs" were responsible for the death of 14 persons in the Shenandoah disaster, and for the failure of the Hawaiian flight and the Arctic expedition.

The battle to clear the navy of this grave accusation was to be opened by a select list of the country's best naval pilots and airplane constructors.

There were more than 15 pilots in the list called by the board, which included Commander John Rodgers, who drew Mitchell's fire because of the unsuccessful PN-9 Honolulu flight; Captain George Steele, Commandant of the Lakehurst naval dirigible station; men who planned the navy's Arctic expedition, and members of the crew of the NC-4, first plane ever to fly across the Atlantic.

Chicagoan Named Head of National Safety Congress

CLEVELAND, Oct. 1.—Charles B. Scott, Chicago, head of the Chicago Bureau of Public Safety, was elected president of the National Safety Congress in convention here to succeed C. B. Auel, Pittsburgh.

The fourth day of the five-day safety study, was taken up today with sessions on industrial and public safety.

Carl R. Gray, president of the Union Pacific system, Omaha, Neb., who came here to participate in the safety discussions of the steam rail group, made the principal talk at last night's banquet. He surprised his listeners with some amazing vital statistics of his own board. He said, "In 1920 there were 3,120 persons killed in accidents on our roads alone. Thus far in 1925 only 271 persons have been killed on the Union Pacific."

The deaths listed were: Tokio, 3; Yokusaka, 6; Yokohama, 20.

Negro is Sentenced To Die in Electric Chair for Murder

CINCINNATI, Oct. 1.—The brutal slaying of Edna Boswell, 14-year-old Addyston school girl, committed September 16 by James Henry, 37, a Negro from Georgia, was legally avenged today. Late yesterday afternoon after the speediest murder hearing on record in Hamilton county, Henry was sentenced to death by Judges F. L. Hoffman, and S. A. Leblond. January 9, 1926, was the date set for the execution.

The sentence was passed after the two jurists had heard all of the testimony in the case, including a graphic description of the crime by the slayer who demonstrated how he had crushed the girl's skull with a sharp pointed stone after robbing her of her money.

Palmer Stripped Of Executive Power By Shipping Board

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Leigh C. Palmer, president of the Emergency Fleet corporation and central figure in the government's shipping controversy, virtually was stripped of all executive powers today by the United States shipping board.

The board by an unanimous vote repealed two resolutions, enacted a year ago, which had given Palmer authority to operate the government's fleet of merchant vessels without the board's supervision. The authority had been conferred on Palmer at President Coolidge's request.

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Selling pressure on the motor stocks resulted in a lower level of prices for many of the active stocks in the early trading today, but recoveries were in order almost immediately, while stocks in other sections of the market forged ahead at the opening.

Dodge Brothers' spurt to a new high at 31¾, up 2½ points, was the feature of the low-priced motor stocks, while Marland's leadership of the oils into higher price territory, and North American company's advance to above 59 emphasized the buoyant tone of the oil and utility stocks.

The unexpected reduction of the Bank of England's discount rate from 4½ to 4 per cent emphasized the firm situation in international money markets. Operations of the United States Steel corporation's mills were reported at 80 per cent of capacity, against 76 per cent last week, and prices of steel bars were firm at 2 cents a pound.

Early losses of from 1 to 3 points were easily made up as the whole market surged forward in the first hour, in response to the more favorable outlook in the money situation. Dodge Brothers' common stock ran away from hte balance of the motor list, and transactions were unusually heavy.

Marland's oil movement gained momentum as the session advanced, and reached a new high on the movement at 46 in heavy trading. Fleischmann sold above 126, a new high for the year. Railway Steel Springs jumped 8 points to 178.

Call money renewed at 5½ per cent.

The solicitor also notified the solons that the ordinance for the construction of a sanitary sewer in Hazel street would be ready for passage at the next meeting. All legislation for the Edgewood avenue sewer has been enacted, and the work on both streets will be let in the same contract.

Settle Pole Controversy

Frank Swaney, commercial manager for the Ohio Bell Telephone company, attended a caucus session of the solons, held before their open session, to discuss the proposed removal of the telephone pole which stands at the corner of Mulberry street and Pennsylvania avenue in front of the Ohio Valley Oil company's new filling station. Council expressed a desire at some time to make this curb round in which event it would be necessary to move the pole.

Swaney informed the lawmakers that his company stood ready to change the location of the pole at any time that council decided to go ahead with the improvement. This wrote finis to the controversy.

Chicago Stock Company Comes to Ceramic Next Week.

The popular Chicago Stock company is due for a week's engagement at the Ceramic theatre, starting Monday evening, Oct. 5. Of course this sterling attraction does not need any introduction or praise. As year after year it has been getting bigger and better until it now stands pre-eminent in dignified amusement circles.

During its engagement here, the company is to present six former Broadway successes, all of which have had record runs on the Great White Way and the endorsement of the critics and theatregoers alike. Each of the productions is to be given an elaborate scenic treatment and correctly costumed and acted in an artistic manner by a company seldom seen in the field of stock.

The opening attraction of the engagement Monday evening will be Irene Bordoni's former New York success, the song play, "Little Miss Bluebeard," which was written by the celebrated farceur, Avery Hopwood, author of "Up in Mabel's Room," and many other famous plays.

Other plays to be offered during the engagement will be Mark Swan's brilliant comedy, "She Walked in Her Sleep," Mary Boland's New York triumph, "Meet the Wife," the mystery thriller; "The Bat," Ina Claire's former starring vehicle; "Grounds for Divorce," and the exceptionally funny comedy, "A Bachelor's Night," which was written by Wilson Colligan, the author of "Getting Gertie's Garter."

Tom Meighan Plays Banker's Son Role In Ceramic Picture

In "The Man Who Found Himself," his latest starring production for Paramount, a prison story by Booth Tarkington, which is the photo play at Ceramic theatre Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Tom Meighan has the role of a happy-go-lucky son of a small town banker. His family is looked up to and respected in their community.

As things sometimes happen in a small town, the bank goes to the wall as a result of a "run" brought on when a rival banker, played by Frank Morgan, of stage fame, informs the bank examiner that there is some funny business going on in the Macauley bank.

It develops that Tom's younger brother, because of the insistence of his pinheaded, luxury-loving wife, had lost heavily in Wall Street, borrowed bank funds to "cover up" and then had gone to the rival banker for aid which was promised him. The other, however, takes advantage of the situation to get rid of a big business rival by informing bank officials of the irregularity.

To shield his brother, Tom goes "up the river" for a two-year stretch. His term is barely half served when word comes that Lon Morris, the crooked banker, has talked Tom's fiancee, played by Virginia Valli, into marrying him. Tom, now a trusty, skips jail to prevent the wedding but arrives on the scene just too late. He returns to finish out his term, dead set against everything and everybody.

When, finally, he is freed, his family, not knowing the sacrifice he has made for them, are horrified lest his criminal past disgrace them. They urge him to leave town, virtually turning him out. He thinks even the girl has deserted him.

Tom then realizes the truth of a brother convict that it isn't the prison itself that's so bad, it's the stigma of jail, the sinister whispers that follow him everywhere. Embittered, he determined to get revenge on the man who had "put him away." But the girl, who has always been true to him seeks him out and turns his face again toward the light.

It's a situation of great drama and heart-interest.

SIX BROADWAY PLAYS BOOKED

Chicago Stock Company Comes to Ceramic Next Week.

The popular Chicago Stock company is due for a week's engagement at the Ceramic theatre, starting Monday evening, Oct. 5. Of course this sterling attraction does not need any introduction or praise. As year after year it has been getting bigger and better until it now stands pre-eminent in dignified amusement circles.

During its engagement here, the company is to present six former Broadway successes, all of which have had record runs on the Great White Way and the endorsement of the critics and theatregoers alike. Each of the productions is to be given an elaborate scenic treatment and correctly costumed and acted in an artistic manner by a company seldom seen in the field of stock.

The opening attraction of the engagement Monday evening will be Irene Bordoni's former New York success, the song play, "Little Miss Bluebeard," which was written by the celebrated farceur, Avery Hopwood, author of "Up in Mabel's Room," and many other famous plays.

Other plays to be offered during the engagement will be Mark Swan's brilliant comedy, "She Walked in Her Sleep," Mary Boland's New York triumph, "Meet the Wife," the mystery thriller; "The Bat," Ina Claire's former starring vehicle; "Grounds for Divorce," and the exceptionally funny comedy, "A Bachelor's Night," which was written by Wilson Colligan, the author of "Getting Gertie's Garter."

Tom Meighan Plays Banker's Son Role In Ceramic Picture

In "The Man Who Found Himself," his latest starring production for Paramount, a prison story by Booth Tarkington, which is the photo play at Ceramic theatre Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Tom Meighan has the role of a happy-go-lucky son of a small town banker. His family is looked up to and respected in their community.

As things sometimes happen in a small town, the bank goes to the wall as a result of a "run" brought on when a rival banker, played by Frank Morgan, of stage fame, informs the bank examiner that there is some funny business going on in the Macauley bank.

It develops that Tom's younger brother, because of the insistence of his pinheaded, luxury-loving wife, had lost heavily in Wall Street, borrowed bank funds to "cover up" and then had gone to the rival banker for aid which was promised him. The other, however, takes advantage of the situation to get rid of a big business rival by informing bank officials of the irregularity.

To shield his brother, Tom goes "up the river" for a two-year stretch. His term is barely half served when word comes that Lon Morris, the crooked banker, has talked Tom's fiancee, played by Virginia Valli, into marrying him. Age and Youth Will Renew Struggle In World's Series

REPELLING BUCS STIFF JOB FOR VETERAN NATS

But Washington Has Been There Before and Its Capabilities and Limitations are Known; Pittsburgh is the Problem; Will Youth Climb New Heights, or Break and Falter Under Strain of the Moment?

By FORD C. FRICK.

FORD FRICK

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Youth, the sages declare, is an uncertain quantity.

How true that observation may be will be proved in the coming world series, for it will find youth embracing far flung opportunity—and age holding the breach against the onslaught.

Pittsburgh, of course, represents youth. Here is raw strength. Here are Traynor and Wright and Moore and Cuyler, carrying the banner of promise and pushing their claims for ascendency.

And Washington, therefore, must be old age and experience. Age, disillusioned by fact and unhampered by fancy; age knowing its own limitations and fighting grimly to protect itself against encroachment.

Washington, as age, has been there before. You and I and the rest of us know what Washington will do—know the capabilities and the limitations of those veterans who have established themselves through long years of battle and tense moments fraught with possibility.

Washington we know. Pittsburgh is the problem.

Will youth, battling in the fenzy of a dream in the making, find a new spirit to carry it to untold heights beyond the reach of plodding veteran experience? Will Traynor and Moore and Cuyler and Wright reach out to find new summits of baseball greatness?

Or, overawed by the glamor of a moment, greater than they have ever experienced, will they falter and break before the strain which only veteran nerves can pass untouched?

Answer that and you answer the question as to who will win the world series. Answer those problems and you answer, too, the problem which is vexing more than one baseball expert on the eve of the series.

An airplane that may be taken apart in tweny minutes and put together again in one hour has been perfected.

DEMPSEY SPARS IN CLEVELAND

Boxes Six Rounds With Three Spavined Foes.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 1.—Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion, was the attraction which packed the Olympic arena to the doors last night. He boxed six rounds with three heavyweights, none of whom could even give him an argument. Nick Neuman, and Marty Culter, both fat and heavy, in addition to Ray Newman, Dempsey's sparring partner, were the men honored. The champion was greeted with cheers, and his work in the ring applauded.

In the main bout of ten rounds, Al Walthers, Canton, was forced to quit when he broke his hand in the fourth round. After winning the first round by a wide margin, Tommy Freeman, of Hot Springs, was only saved from a knockout in the seecond by the bell, but in delivering the blow, Walthers broke his hand. The fight went on two more rounds, when Walthers' hand was examined and the injury disclosed.

Young Irish, of Akron, won the first two rounds of his bout with Harry Marcus, but the fight was stopped in the fourth when his seconds sent a towel hurtling into the ring. Marcus had him near the knockout point in the third.

BISONS TO OPEN WITH DUQUESNE

BETHANY, W. Va., Oct. 1.—Saturday afternoon on the Bethany college athletic field the Bison eleven will stage the initial battle of the season with Duquesne university. Just what kind of a showing the Bethany team will make in their initial appearance is open to much speculation but Bison followers are not at all discouraged. The Bison aerial attack this year will cause their opponents no little trouble. Fiers, a first year man, will probably be used at left end instead of at full where he was originally slated. He has been shifted to the terminal post because of his ability to nail passes. Rhine, a rangy lad from McKeesport, Pa., will likely be at the other position. He is also very adept at handling passes. Carey, Barlow and Dimick are well able to take care of the hurling proposition.

Tinson and Wilmore, two husky linemen of 200 pounds, will bee at the tackle positions Saturday with Crawford and Griffiths at guard. Price, a first year man, will probably be at center although theree is very likely to bee a change made in favor of Scott, a Bison veteran of one season. It looks like Bobby Stobbs, former Linsly Institute star, and "Alf" Carey, Follansbee, W. Va., will be at the halves with either Barlow or Dimick at quarter and calling signals. Carl Hamill of Wheeling, another Linsley star, will be at full.

Tagging The Bases

Senators who may do no more than wear their pants shiny during the big series appeared against the Red Sox in the first game of the last series of the regular season and managed to lose, 5 to 4. Roger Peckinpaugh was in charge of the Senators-elect, while Bucky Harris remained behind in Washington.

Bob McGraw, recruit right-hander, appeared for the Dodgers against the Phillies, and though fairly parsimonious with hits, was quite wild in two instances, so the Phillies won, 6 to 4.

The other clubs enjoyed a rest.

I'm probably no exception.

I picked Washington to win the American league pennant and wasn't a bit sore when I saw that the Pirates were booked to cop the National league end.

But now as I look over the whole situation I find a lot of things wrong with it.

For instance, the Athletics would have introduced at least one novelty into the classic had they copped instead of the Senators.

They could have swelled the attendance considerably by announcing that one of the star acts would be that of Al Simmons batting with one foot in the water bucket.

Now we have had one series featured by the introduction of the pillow. Cozie Dolan introduced a trick brain in another. But we have never had a nice, shiny water bucket brought to the plate and made to do duty as a foothold for a batter.

Then there are the Giants. We got so used to seeing them in their threering act entitled "Carrying Out McGraw's Orders" that we will miss them. Jawn has 'em in a concession tent outside the gate this year—selling them at reduced prices. Take one home to the baby.

There's Eddie Rommel, too. Eddie wonders, and rightfully, too, what a pitcher has to do to get into a world's series. Rommel battled it out with the best pitchers in the league for the leadership on the mound. Maybe he can get his answer from Walter Johnson, who will tell him "Work 18 years like that."

Eddie Collins got his White Sox all darned up, washed and out on the line early this season and expected to exhibit them in the fall fair. It wasn't right to fail to send him entry blanks.

The Reds got left out, too. The government and everybody else has been hard on the Reds here lately. But Manager Hendricks has never been accused of hobnobbing with Saklatvala, the Russian envoy to the Interparliamentary union, who found all the boats rented when he tried to sail to the United States for the opening of the sessions of the union's congress.

And the Cubs. I always did like animal acts. And Owner Wrigley could have put on a good one. Have all the Cubs play hide and seek, "Find the manager," or something like that.

And Babe Ruth. Somebody overlooked a bet there. There isn't a player on either team in the series who can eat as many hot dogs between innings as Babe. Why pick on the lunch stand crew that way?

But there is one thing that makes me warm up to the series. That is that the whole thing's staged outside New York. Which will make it an educational tour for many New York fans, who still think that Indians roam the woods of Pittsburgh and miners and operators live side by side in vine-covered cottages around the tipples of the mines.

To revive farming and truck gardening in the Straits Settlements a series of fairs will be held in the near future.

SENATORS SHOW GREATER PUNCH THAN BUCS IN LATE FINISHES

By Norman E. Brown.

The Washington Senators are better "finishers" than the Pirates.

Going into the late innings with the score tie the American league entrants "come through" oftener than the National league champions.

Records of the ending big league season show this.

Up to the time that the two clubs had inched the flags in their circuits each had played in 21 games in which the score at the beginning of the seventh inning stood a tie.

Pittsburgh produced the punch to pull the game out of the fire in 10 of these contests. They failed to put over the necessary runs in 11.

Washington triumphed in 13 of the 21 games. They failed to come through in 8.

Eight of the 21 games in which the Pirates found themselves tied with their opponents in the seventh inning went into extra innings. Of these long-drawn games the Pirates won 4 and lost 4, an even break.

Nine of the seventh-inning-tie games in which Washington took part went into extra innings, and Washington won 6 of these and lost 3—a .667 average.

That the teams were about equal in defensive strength in these back to-the-wall games is indicated by the fact that the Pirate hurlers held the opposition scoreless in the late innings while their mates were putting over 8 of their 10 victories and the Washington hurlers held the opposition scoreless in 11 of the 13 victories.

According to these figures Washington will have the advantage in the world's series games, should they hold the slugging Pirates in check until the late innings.

The gameness of the Senators in tight places was the outstanding feature of the playing of that team in the 1924 series. Judging by the figures cited the team retains this gameness. The Pirates will be handicapped by their inexperience in playing under world's series tension.

Will Washington's ability to put over the big punch at the right time decide the series?

BOONE PESSIMISTIC IN OUTLOOK FOR SATURDAY

Declares Blue and White Eleven is in for Tough Battle With New Philadelphia Gridders; Superintendent McVey, However, Confident That Ceramic City Crew Will Win.

Coach O. V. Boone has assumed a characteristic Gil Dobie outlook for the Blue and White squad's chances with New Philadelphia here on Saturday following last night's workout at Patterson Field.

"They just couldn't get going," declared the Blue and White mentor, and if there's no improvement between now and Saturday, I hate to think what will happen."

He related how his reserve eleven shook up the varsity line for 24 yards in half a dozen downs or so, with the backfield being compelled to stop plays that filtered frequently through the line.

On the other hand, Superintendent McVey is nothing if not optimistic. "We'll beat them," he declared and apparently feels quite certain of it.

However, Coach Boone is probably as confident as anyone else that the varsity machine will be running as smoothly by Saturday as it should be but desires to dissipate any feeling of overconfidence that might exist following the victory over Sebring.

At the same time, he realizes the nature of the task that confronts the team. New Philly won last year 27 to 27. They scored three touchdowns in the first quarter, but after that was held to an even break.

TRIANGLES AT CANTON SUNDAY

CANTON, Oct. 1.—Dayton Triangles will be the Canton Bulldog's opponent here Sunday afternoon. The Bulldog's Sunday pulled through their initial National league encounter in fine style, beating Rochester, N. Y., 14-7.

The Triangles have a powerful team. Last Sunday they held Rock Island, Ill., to a 0-0 tie while the week previous Rock Island tied the Bears of Chicago, one of the strongest clubs in the circuit.

Dayton has a squad of former college and sandlot players who have been playing together for several years. The have always been hard for Canton to beat, and for that reason the southwestern Ohio club is feared by the local eleven.

Pete Calac, Indian star, signed a Canton contract this week. He is a halfback and came here from Los Angeles. He will be in the lineup next Sunday.

HAMMOND PROS TORONTO FOES

Mundy and Sheehan With Tiger Eleven Sunday.

TORONTO, Oct. 1.—Local football fans are loud in praise of the work of two men from the East Liverpool sector. One of this pair is Mundy, who has held a berth with the Tigers for several seasons at end, and the other is a new man, Sheehan, from Midland.

Sheehan's work at half last Sunday won him much admiration and he is expected to make a good showing Sunday when the Tigers clash with the Hammond, Ind., Pros.

This is the game which will really test the mettle and ability of Al Nesser's group since it was none other than the Hammond eleven which beat the Chicago Cardinals.

The Hammond team includes Carman, Purdue; Fortune, Michigan; Williams, Brown; Beal, W. & J.; Crawford, Illinois; Ults, W. & J.; Dahlgren, Beloit; Tallant, Grove City; Sachs, Loyola; Kendricks, Texas A. & M.; Hess, Indiana; Gavier, Georgia Tech; Robinson, Northwestern; Curzon, Champaign; McDonald, Duluth, and Hudson, Creighton.

The line averages 193 pounds and the backfield 175. This is probably the heaviest and fastest team to be booked here, and the outcome of the game probably will have a bearing on the proposed trip of the Tigers to Atlantic City and New York later.

ORR POINT MAKER FOR MUSKINGUM

A couple of former Wellsville gridders, both of whom have a large number of friends here, got their first real taste of collegiate football last Saturday and, playing a full game, came out second best to none in that particular contest.

Clifford "Pop" Orr and Meryl Todd, two of the stars of the 1923 Orange and Black eleven, were backfield luminaries for Muskingum college eleven in Saturday's tilt with Rio Grande, which ended in a 7-7 deadlock.

Orr, at halfback, scored Muskingum's only touchdown and, in addition, booted the oval for the extra point. Todd played a clever game at quarter.

Age and Youth Will Renew Struggle In World's Series

But Washington Has Been There Before and Its Capabilities and Limitations are Known; Pittsburgh is the Problem; Will Youth Climb New Heights, or Break and Falter Under Strain of the Moment?

By FORD C. FRICK.

FORD FRICK

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Youth, the sages declare, is an uncertain quantity.

How true that observation may be will be proved in the coming world series, for it will find youth embracing far flung opportunity—and age holding the breach against the onslaught.

Pittsburgh, of course, represents youth. Here is raw strength. Here are Traynor and Wright and Moore and Cuyler, carrying the banner of promise and pushing their claims for ascendency.

And Washington, therefore, must be old age and experience. Age, disillusioned by fact and unhampered by fancy; age knowing its own limitations and fighting grimly to protect itself against encroachment.

Washington, as age, has been there before. You and I and the rest of us know what Washington will do—know the capabilities and the limitations of those veterans who have established themselves through long years of battle and tense moments fraught with possibility.

Washington we know. Pittsburgh is the problem.

Will youth, battling in the fenzy of a dream in the making, find a new spirit to carry it to untold heights beyond the reach of plodding veteran experience? Will Traynor and Moore and Cuyler and Wright reach out to find new summits of baseball greatness?

Or, overawed by the glamor of a moment, greater than they have ever experienced, will they falter and break before the strain which only veteran nerves can pass untouched?

Answer that and you answer the question as to who will win the world series. Answer those problems and you answer, too, the problem which is vexing more than one baseball expert on the eve of the series.

An airplane that may be taken apart in tweny minutes and put together again in one hour has been perfected.

DEMPSEY SPARS IN CLEVELAND

Boxes Six Rounds With Three Spavined Foes.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 1.—Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion, was the attraction which packed the Olympic arena to the doors last night. He boxed six rounds with three heavyweights, none of whom could even give him an argument. Nick Neuman, and Marty Culter, both fat and heavy, in addition to Ray Newman, Dempsey's sparring partner, were the men honored. The champion was greeted with cheers, and his work in the ring applauded.

In the main bout of ten rounds, Al Walthers, Canton, was forced to quit when he broke his hand in the fourth round. After winning the first round by a wide margin, Tommy Freeman, of Hot Springs, was only saved from a knockout in the seecond by the bell, but in delivering the blow, Walthers broke his hand. The fight went on two more rounds, when Walthers' hand was examined and the injury disclosed.

Young Irish, of Akron, won the first two rounds of his bout with Harry Marcus, but the fight was stopped in the fourth when his seconds sent a towel hurtling into the ring. Marcus had him near the knockout point in the third.

BISONS TO OPEN WITH DUQUESNE

BETHANY, W. Va., Oct. 1.—Saturday afternoon on the Bethany college athletic field the Bison eleven will stage the initial battle of the season with Duquesne university. Just what kind of a showing the Bethany team will make in their initial appearance is open to much speculation but Bison followers are not at all discouraged. The Bison aerial attack this year will cause their opponents no little trouble. Fiers, a first year man, will probably be used at left end instead of at full where he was originally slated. He has been shifted to the terminal post because of his ability to nail passes. Rhine, a rangy lad from McKeesport, Pa., will likely be at the other position. He is also very adept at handling passes. Carey, Barlow and Dimick are well able to take care of the hurling proposition.

Tinson and Wilmore, two husky linemen of 200 pounds, will bee at the tackle positions Saturday with Crawford and Griffiths at guard. Price, a first year man, will probably be at center although theree is very likely to bee a change made in favor of Scott, a Bison veteran of one season. It looks like Bobby Stobbs, former Linsly Institute star, and "Alf" Carey, Follansbee, W. Va., will be at the halves with either Barlow or Dimick at quarter and calling signals. Carl Hamill of Wheeling, another Linsley star, will be at full.

Tagging The Bases

Senators who may do no more than wear their pants shiny during the big series appeared against the Red Sox in the first game of the last series of the regular season and managed to lose, 5 to 4. Roger Peckinpaugh was in charge of the Senators-elect, while Bucky Harris remained behind in Washington.

Bob McGraw, recruit right-hander, appeared for the Dodgers against the Phillies, and though fairly parsimonious with hits, was quite wild in two instances, so the Phillies won, 6 to 4.

The other clubs enjoyed a rest.

TRIANGLES AT CANTON SUNDAY

CANTON, Oct. 1.—Dayton Triangles will be the Canton Bulldog's opponent here Sunday afternoon. The Bulldog's Sunday pulled through their initial National league encounter in fine style, beating Rochester, N. Y., 14-7.

The Triangles have a powerful team. Last Sunday they held Rock Island, Ill., to a 0-0 tie while the week previous Rock Island tied the Bears of Chicago, one of the strongest clubs in the circuit.

Dayton has a squad of former college and sandlot players who have been playing together for several years. The have always been hard for Canton to beat, and for that reason the southwestern Ohio club is feared by the local eleven.

Pete Calac, Indian star, signed a Canton contract this week. He is a halfback and came here from Los Angeles. He will be in the lineup next Sunday.

HAMMOND PROS TORONTO FOES

Mundy and Sheehan With Tiger Eleven Sunday.

TORONTO, Oct. 1.—Local football fans are loud in praise of the work of two men from the East Liverpool sector. One of this pair is Mundy, who has held a berth with the Tigers for several seasons at end, and the other is a new man, Sheehan, from Midland.

Sheehan's work at half last Sunday won him much admiration and he is expected to make a good showing Sunday when the Tigers clash with the Hammond, Ind., Pros.

This is the game which will really test the mettle and ability of Al Nesser's group since it was none other than the Hammond eleven which beat the Chicago Cardinals.

The Hammond team includes Carman, Purdue; Fortune, Michigan; Williams, Brown; Beal, W. & J.; Crawford, Illinois; Ults, W. & J.; Dahlgren, Beloit; Tallant, Grove City; Sachs, Loyola; Kendricks, Texas A. & M.; Hess, Indiana; Gavier, Georgia Tech; Robinson, Northwestern; Curzon, Champaign; McDonald, Duluth, and Hudson, Creighton.

The line averages 193 pounds and the backfield 175. This is probably the heaviest and fastest team to be booked here, and the outcome of the game probably will have a bearing on the proposed trip of the Tigers to Atlantic City and New York later.

ORR POINT MAKER FOR MUSKINGUM

A couple of former Wellsville girdders, both of whom have a large number of friends here, got their first real taste of collegiate football last Saturday and, playing a full game, came out second best to none in that particular contest.

Clifford "Pop" Orr and Meryl Todd, two of the stars of the 1923 Orange and Black eleven, were backfield luminaries for Muskingum college eleven in Saturday's tilt with Rio Grande, which ended in a 7-7 deadlock.

Orr, at halfback, scored Muskingum's only touchdown and, in addition, booted the oval for the extra point. Todd played a clever game at quarter.

Makes Night Driving SAFE

The Controllable Beam on the Better Buick
Night driving strain, the blind insecurity when you dim to keep glare out of the eyes of an approaching driver—both have been eliminated by the Controllable Beam Headlight, a feature of the Better Buick.
Daytime visibility every inch of the way! Bright light all the time! A simple control on the steering wheel lowers the beam when you near another car.
And this is only one of many 1926 improvements which Buick engineering has given to the Better Buick. 75 horsepower and more; Duotone in Duco finish; Triple Sealed Valve-in-Head engine; light-pedal-pressure clutch; approved mechanical 4-wheel brakes; and many other exclusive advancements now make the Better Buick the better car to own and drive.

W. V. U. LIGHTER THAN D.-E. SQUAD

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Oct. 1.—Statistics sent here by Davis Elkins college officials on the "Scarlet Hurricane" football squad reveal that the Mountaineer eleven is going to be outweighed by at least 10 pounds to the men Saturday when it meets the Senators from Randolph county in the new West Virginia stadium. The weight advantage may enable Davis Elkins to wear the light West Virginia team down and in that event Head Coach Ira E. Rodgers will be forced to call on reserve material to turn the Senators back.

Students in the university from Elkins and Mountaineer fans who have seen Coach "Cam" Henderson's warriors claim that weights listed on the statistic sheet sent here for the official program have been "doctored." They maintain that Captain Ellis, Lord, Harbert, Lutz, Leader, Powell, Curtis, Cain and other regulars are much heavier than quoted in the statistics.

Harry Cronin, Fairmont attorney, formerly associated with Mountaineer teams, says that "Davis Elkins has the biggest team I've ever seen since the war. Curtis, Close and Harbert are real football players." According to Cronin the Senators are in good physical condition and he is one of those who believe that Captain Mahan, McHenry, Davis and Dilcher are going to have a busy afternoon when they stack up against the "Hurricane."

Last Night's Fights

Cleveland—Al Walthers, Canton, forced to quit in fourth round, when he broke hand in bout with Tommy Freeman, Hot Springs. Joe Peppers, Cleveland, outpointed K. O. Sweeney, Mingo Junction, six rounds. Al. Zeimer, Cleveland, won from Bobby Dudley, Toledo, six rounds. Harry Marcus, Cleveland, knocked out Young Irish, Akron, fourth round. Tommy Milton, Toledo, knocked out Lou Vida, Cleveland, third round.

Miss Ruth King's "Tip Top Revue" Wins Plaudits at Strand

Miss Ruth King and her "Tip Top Revue" scored another big hit in the musical comedy production, which was presented at the Strand theater last night and which will be repeated today.

Assisted by a cast of 15, Miss King offers a show that is a winner. Another complete change in the program will be made Friday and Saturday, the last two days of the week's engagement.

Among the vaudeville specialties presented last night were the Four Harmony boys in a series of vocal numbers. Miss King gives a dancing act. Chorus numbers were offered by a bevy of pretty girls. Colorful stage settings are used.

W. V. U. LIGHTER THAN D.-E. SQUAD

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Oct. 1.—Statistics sent here by Davis Elkins college officials on the "Scarlet Hurricane" football squad reveal that the Mountaineer eleven is going to be outweighed by at least 10 pounds to the men Saturday when it meets the Senators from Randolph county in the new West Virginia stadium. The weight advantage may enable Davis Elkins to wear the light West Virginia team down and in that event Head Coach Ira E. Rodgers will be forced to call on reserve material to turn the Senators back.

Students in the university from Elkins and Mountaineer fans who have seen Coach "Cam" Henderson's warriors claim that weights listed on the statistic sheet sent here for the official program have been "doctored." They maintain that Captain Ellis, Lord, Harbert, Lutz, Leader, Powell, Curtis, Cain and other regulars are much heavier than quoted in the statistics.

Harry Cronin, Fairmont attorney, formerly associated with Mountaineer teams, says that "Davis Elkins has the biggest team I've ever seen since the war. Curtis, Close and Harbert are real football players." According to Cronin the Senators are in good physical condition and he is one of those who believe that Captain Mahan, McHenry, Davis and Dilcher are going to have a busy afternoon when they stack up against the "Hurricane."

Last Night's Fights

Cleveland—Al Walthers, Canton, forced to quit in fourth round, when he broke hand in bout with Tommy Freeman, Hot Springs. Joe Peppers, Cleveland, outpointed K. O. Sweeney, Mingo Junction, six rounds. Al. Zeltner, Cleveland, won from Bobby Dudley, Toledo, six rounds. Harry Marcus, Cleveland, knocked out Young Irish, Akron, fourth round. Tommy Milton, Toledo, knocked out Lou Vida, Cleveland, third round.

Miss Ruth King's "Tip Top Revue" Wins Plaudits at Strand

Miss Ruth King and her "Tip Top Revue" scored another big hit in the musical comedy production, which was presented at the Strand theater last night and which will be repeated today.

Assisted by a cast of 15, Miss King offers a show that is a winner. Another complete change in the program will be made Friday and Saturday, the last two days of the week's engagement.

Among the vaudeville specialties presented last night were the Four Harmony boys in a series of vocal numbers. Miss King gives a dancing act. Chorus numbers were offered by a bevy of pretty girls. Colorful stage settings are used.

The motion picture, "Through the Dark," features Coleen Moore and other stars.

Chrysler popularity among members of the army air service was further emphasized recently by the sale of two Chrysler Six coaches to Lieutenant R. G. Lockwood and C. E. Crumrine, of McCook Field, Dayton.

At the same time the possibilities of a new slogan, "I'd fly 190 miles for a Chrysler" were made apparent. Lieutenants Lockwood and Crumrine flew from Dayton to Detroit and drove their cars back overland.

I DO NOT want to be thin! I just want to be my right weight! I want these hollows filled out. I just want enough firm, plump flesh on my bones to fill out my figure."

Of course you do. You want a figure that you can drape your clothes on—not just hang them on! What's the use of having pretty clothes, if they just hang on you?

And what would you say if you were told you could have the figure you want? A graceful, well rounded body—firm, solid flesh—just enough—just your right weight? You'd be mighty happy, wouldn't you?

Well, then, be happy—because you can have it! Put plenty of red cells in your blood and watch your weight go up to where you want it! That's what's the matter with you! Your blood is impoverished. J. J. Mitchell and 'The News'
Mr. President
The Dog Believes.
He Should Have Lived.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

(The opinions expressed in this column are strictly those of Mr. Brisbane and not necessarily in consonance with the policies of The Review-Tribune).

Copyright, 1925, by N. Y. American, Inc.

You need not be a newspaperman all your life to understand the most important fact in newspaper work, and John J. Mitchell, president of the Illinois Merchants' Trust company, proves it.

To his intense surprise, when Victor Lawson died Mr. Mitchell found the Chicago Daily News dropped into his lap with power to do with it as he pleased. This is what he did, according to accounts in the Chicago Daily News office:

He sent for three men upon whom Victor Lawson had relied in his lifetime and said to them:

"I know that a newspaper must rely for success on newspapermen, as banks rely on bankers. If you want my advice, and you ought not to need it, I will give it to you. But I want you to decide what ought to be done, and do it. All I ask of you is to prove to me that Victor Lawson showed good judgment when he made you his chief assistants, and to agree among yourselves."

The New York World dwindled in the hands of Jay Gould; the Herald, Sun, Press, Mail, in New York, and half a dozen other newspapers out of New York, faded away like sickly infants in the hands of Frank Munsey, able business man and financier, but with a lofty intellect and incapable of descending to the humdrum details of newspaper work—in other words, not a newspaper man.

Gould, Munsey and other business men, with newspapers on their hands, might have done much better had they known what John J. Mitchell knows—that it takes a newspaper man to run a newspaper, but it takes a railroad man to run a railroad and a good peanut vendor to run a peanut stand.

President Coolidge, how are you impressed by the testimony of Major Ralph Royce before your air board?

It isn't necessary to ask. Every intelligent American knows your common sense and sound judgment.

But, for the benefit of some newspapers and obsolete military and naval "higher ups" that oppose an independent air force, to publish as widely as possible one part of Major Royce's testimony, as public service, said: "Last year I was inspected by eleven generals, and not one of them

HANLEY SPEAKS AT NOON MEET

Municipal Court is Lawyer's Topic at Kiwanis Luncheon.

"The establishment of a municipal court in East Liverpool means the abolition of 'red tape,' the speeding-up of justice and that the poor man will receive the same kind of treatment as the rich man."

In these words, Attorney J. C. Hanley summed up the benefits of the municipal court which will be established here next January 1, at the noon meeting of the Kiwanis club at the Larkins annex, Market street, today.

Hanley, who is a candidate for judge of the new court at the general election on November 3, pointed out that the excessive costs which ordinarily accompany an attachment suit will be eliminated and that the workman will have an incentive to pay his bills.

"We hear much criticism of the slowness which most courts move," said Hanley. "This new court will speed up the work so that the ordinary case can be settled within three or four weeks after being filed instead of dragging along for months.

CAILLAUX PLAN IS VOTED DOWN BY "BIG FOUR" AT WASHINGTON

AMERICANS ACT

Reply to French Announcement After White House Visit.

By GEORGE R. HOLMES

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Rejecting in their entirety the terms proposed by Joseph Caillaux, the French finance minister—and terms which the French announced already had been accepted—the American debt commission today submitted a new settlement plan to the French.

Promise Answer at 3 p. m.

The new plan was evolved at a meeting this morning between President Coolidge and four of the American commissioners—Secretaries Mellon, Hoover, Senator Smoot and Representative Crisp—and was submitted to the crestfallen French in a brief, formal meeting at the treasury.

Submission of the fresh plan came after an unprecendented [illegible] and chain of events which admittedly has brought the negotiations to the brink of rupture and failure.

M. Caillaux and his colleagues retired immediately to the embassy to study it and promised to return to the treasury with their answer at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Answer Means Parley's Fate.

There was little doubt at noon today but that on the French answer depends the success or failure of the present negotiations.

Both commissions were in an angry frame of mind this morning because of the rapid and sensational developments that preceded presentation of the new American proposals.

The Americans were angry because

Today, Friday and Saturday are Fall Display Days in East Liverpool.

With more than half a hundred merchants co-operating, the latest creations for fall and winter wear are being exhibited here.

Hundreds of persons, the majority of them women, crowded the downtown streets last evening to view the styles from the show windows. Shades, which have been drawn during the entire week, were raised at 7:30 o'clock.

The windows revealed a hint of the many surprises which are to be found inside the stores. New stocks have been arriving almost daily and never before were local stores so well supplied with selections in all kinds of merchandise.

Black and Gold Popular.

Men's, women's and children's ready-made apparel, dry goods of all kinds, draperies, millinery, footwear, lingerie, household furnishings, etc, are featured in the exhibit.

Judging from the displays, Dame Fashion has decreed that black and gold combinations will be popular. Like the proverbial black cat, black has again made its appearance, but this means black with silver or gold or black with white or black colors.

The way in which black will be done by the masters of the dressmaking craft to make it one of the distinguished things of the season. Black must be well treated or it is dull and gloomy. Broadcloth coat frocks are trimmed with gold lace collars and cuffs and black velvet with a

Three Proposals are Adopted Without Debate.

Special Session is Devoid of Verbal Clashes.

Lacking the usual verbal clashes and denunciations of the municipal departments, which have characterized previous sessions, peace reigned supreme, probabaly for the first time in 21 months, at a special meeting of the city solons last night.

Not a dissenting vote was cast on three legislative proposals. The session, however, was brief, adjournment being taken within a half hour after President L. T. Capehart rapped his gavel to order.

The legislation, passed on three readings suspension of the rules, included: a resolution, declaring it necessary to transfer $486.67 from the liquor enforcement fund to the public library fund; an ordinance empowering the library trustees to enter into a contract for the repairing of roof and dome of the building, and an ordinance to appropriate $6,000 from the gasoline tax fund for repairing and maintaing streets and roads.

Money For Street Repairs

The resolution transfering money from the liquor enforcement fund to the library fund was declared to be an emergency measure as was also the ordinance authorizing the library board to enter into a contract for the repair of the roof. Both pieces of legislation became effective upon the signature of Mayor Charles Brown.

Solicitor Harry Brokaw told the solons that the money derived from the two-cent tax on gasoline, returned to the city from the state, could only be used in the repair and maintenance of improved streets and alleys, but

NEW SENSATION SPRUNG AS PRESIDENT'S BOARD SEEKS AVIATION FACTS

ASSERTS 50 PER CENT OF PILOTS FAVOR SEPARATE AIR CORPS

Navy Prepares to Fight Back at Col. Mitchell's Charges That "Bungling Amateurs" Were Responsible for Death of 14 Persons Aboard Shenandoah and Failure of Hawiian Flight.

By KENNETH CLARK.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—A new sensation was sprung before the president's board today when Lieut.-Commander R. R. Paunack, of the navy bureau of aeronautics flatly declared that "some naval flyers" were afraid to express their full views on aviation policies because of possible disciplinary action by superiors.

Despite declarations of navy chiefs that naval aviation was functioning smoothly and well, Paunack said that fully 50 per cent of the pilots favored a separate air corps as the best means to develop the air force.

"Have you ever heard naval officers admit that they hesitated to express views for improving the air service?" asked Senator Bingham, (R.) of Connecticut, member of the board.

"Yes, sir," replied Paunack, curtly.

Paunack was the first of a group of naval pilots to testify before the board, which devoted the entire session to listening to their grievances against the present naval air service.

GERMAN DIRIGIBLE EXPERT STANDS PAT ON GAS VALVE SYSTEM CHARGE

LAKEHURST, N. J., Oct. 1.—Captain Anton Heinen, German dirigible expert, and former instructor of the crew of the Shenandoah, today dramatically revealed that Benjamin O. Hereth, mechanician aboard the ill-fated airship, told him the ship had "burst."

"The court is entitled to know all the facts concerning the Shenandoah disaster, said Rear Admiral Jones, president of the naval court of inquiry, before whom Heinen was testifying.

"It is Benjamin Hereth who said the ship burst through internal pressure," Heinen replied. "He gave men the story of the inner conditions of the Shenandoah. I did not solicit it."

LAKEHURST, N. J., Oct. 1.—Captain Anton Heinen, veteran German Zeppelin expert and one-time dirigible instructor to the crew of the ill-fated Shenandoah, continued to instruct his former pupils in airship methods today in resuming his testimony before the naval court of inquiry investigating the disaster.

The witness was severely cross-examined by Lieut. C. E. Rosendahl regarding Heinen's charges that reduction in the gas valve system and the lack of foresight in handling the ship were the two causes for the destruction of the ship.

Amplifying his statement that the Shenandoah could have avoided the storm, Heinen said he had several times in his long experience as an air pilot seen the same danger signs in the weather revealed to the officers

DIVERS RESUME WORK IN ATTEMPT TO RAISE SUNKEN SUBMARINE S-51

NEW LONDON, Conn., Oct. 1.—It was announced shortly after 9 o'clock this morning that the wreckers Monarch and Century had arrived at the scene of the S-51 disaster. Weather conditions were reported as improved.

Divers descended to pass slings under the stern of the derelict preparatory to making another attempt to lift her to the surface.

It developed later that the court of inquiry proceedings, to fix responsibility for the disaster, probably would be held at the local base as soon as Admiral Christy is able to leave the scene of operations. The inquiry originally was scheduled for Boston on or about Oct. 15. It now develops that it will be held as soon as rescue operations are officially abandoned.

Another early development was the fact that neither of the derricks, now attempting to raise the stern of the hulk, have a greater lift than 100 feet while the depth of the ship has been variously estimated as being between 125 and 130 feet. The wreckers, however, will be able to overcome this disadvantage when the time comes, Lieut. Commander E. J. Flanigan said.

"If and when the ship is raised to the 100-foot level, the weight of the craft naturally will decrease as the leverage on it increases," he said. "It is probably that the Century will be permitted to hold the hulk in position, while the Monarch takes another hitch in its lines and then finishes the job."

KELLOGG WARNS AGAINST BOLSHEVISM AND PLEADS FOR RELIGIOUS AND POLITICAL TOLERANCE AT INTER-PARLIAMENTARY UNION'S MEETING

By FRED J. WALKER.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—A solemn warning against Bolshevism, which he inferentially described as one of the greatest problems now faced by democracy, was sounded today by Secretary of State Kellogg at the opening meeting of the Inter-parliamentary union.

Speaking before more than 400 famous legislators from upwards of 40 nations in the chamber of the house of representatives, Kellogg made a plea for religious political tolerance, which he described as in jeopardy throughout the world.

"Representative democracies are today facing as grave problems as at any time within the memory of any man now living. There are forces at work for the disintegration of orderly representative government and for the establishment of class rule which may well give us serious thought," Kellogg said.

"I am not an alarmist and I have absolute confidence in the intelligence and the patriotism of the people of all those nations who have reared and maintained the marvelous institutions of the twentieth century, but I cannot be blind to the forces which are working in many of the self-governing countries for the destruction of really representative government and the establishment of class tyranny."

Kellogg declared that individual liberty must be maintained if democracy is to survive.

"Stability of government, security for the person, the right to labor and enjoy the fruits of industry, protection of property and of equal opportunity are necessary for the highest advancement of the human race," he said.

Touching on the broad aims of the union, Kellogg asserted that the cure for war must come from the "hearts and understanding of the people. Universal peace has been the cry of statesmen for ages, but no one has yet found a specific."

"Arbitration and judicial settlements," he said, "have a conspicuous place and are powerful instruments for peace but there must be more than treaties and conventions. There must be the spirit of tolerence and a willingness to submit to arbitration or judicial settlements."

Secretary Kellogg's action in barring Saklatvala, the Indian communist member of the British parliament, was put directly before the union today by Senator Borah of Idaho, who transmitted a letter from the parsee, denouncing his exclusion. Borah sent the letter without comment for such action as the union cares to take, which, it is said, probably will be none at all.

W. W. ATTERBURY PENNSY CHIEF

Succeeds Samuel Rea, Who Quits at Age of 70.

William Wallace Atterbury is the new president of the Pennsylvania Railroad company. He succeeds Samuel Rea, retired under the company's pension regulations.

Atterbury, who has been a vice president of the company for the last 16 years, assumed his new duties today. Rea, who was 70 years old on Sept. 21, will remain a member of the board of directors.

The new president, one of the most widely known railroad executives in the world, is 59 years old. He was born in New Albany, Ind. After being graduated from Yale, he entered the service of the Pennsylvania railroad in 1886 as an apprentice in the shops at Altoona, Pa. He received many promotions and in 1903 he was made general manager of the lines east of Pittsburgh, becoming a vice president six years later.

During the World war, Atterbury was director general of transportation of the American forces, having charge of the construction and operation of the transportation requirements of the United States in France and harmonizing them with those of the allies. He held the rank of brigadier general and received decorations from the United States, France, Great Britain and Belgium.

Prior to electing Atterbury, the directors placed on its records an appreciation of the importance and value of Rea's service to the company and its gratification that he remain a member of the board. He was presented with a piece of silver plate made in London in the reign of Charles II (1683). Rea has been a collector of old English silver for many years.

Rea, today said that unless some emergency arises, which cannot now be foreseen, it will be unnecessary to issue and sell any securities of the company this year and probably none in 1926. The earnings and cash position of the company at present are excellent, he added. Rea's statement was prompted by reports that the company was about to sell large amounts of stock.

A. It is difficult to say at exactly what age a walnut tree bears, as it depends on existing conditions. It should be at least ten years old to bear fruit, and from 20 to 40 years for proper lumber. It should be at a minimum one foot in diameter and have a long trunk for lumbering purposes.

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it seemed cruel that so many constipated infants and children had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and 'nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all children's little ills, he did not believe that a sickening "purge" or "physic" every little while was necessary.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which regulates the bowels. A single dose will establish natural, healthy bowel movement for weeks at a time, even if the child was chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but, best of all, it is often months before another dose is necessary. Besides, it is absolutely harmless, and so pleasant that even a cross, feverish, bilious, sick child gladly takes it.

Easy to Keep Thick, Wavy, Lustrous

Girls! Try this! When combing and brushing your hair, just moisten your hair brush with a little "Danderine" and brush it through your hair. The effect is startling! You can dress your hair immediately and it will appear twice as thick and heavy, an abundance of gleamy, wavy hair, sparkling with life, incomparably soft, fresh, youthful.

Besides beautifying the hair, a 35-cent bottle of refreshing, fragrant "Danderine" from any drug or toilet counter will do wonders, particularly if the hair is dry, thin, brittle, faded or streaked with gray from constant curling and waving which burn the color, lustre and very life from any woman's hair.

"Danderine" acts on the hair like fresh showers of rain and sunshine act on vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates, nourishes and strengthens them, stopping falling hair and helping the hair to grow thick, healthy and luxuriant.

Armour to Teach Women Many Ways To Serve Ham

Again the Review-Tribune has been chosen as the medium for Armour and Company's advertising in this community.

The campaign will be a continuation of the "60 Ways" message which has already earned an enormous popularity in all parts of the country. The idea is to make the advertising render a real service by teaching women the numerous ways of serving Armour's "Star" Ham on occasions of different kinds.

The reason back of the selection of the Review-Tribune for this vital message was because the Review-Tribune reaches the class of readers desired. And, inasmuch as Armour and Company use newspapers to a large extent, they must, naturally, select publications which assure the greatest possible number of returns.

The campaign in the Review-Tribune will be educational to a large extent. It will feature the "60 Ways" idea—and as well, explain to the reader the value of purchasing ham of reputation.

The "60 Ways to Serve" Booklet, several hundred thousand copies of which have been distributed, is free. It can be obtained from local dealers—or will be mailed upon request. A tag is attached to every "Star" Ham for this purpose.

According to Armour and Company, ham is the most popular of all meats. Tastes differ with respect to meats, but everybody seems to like ham—especially, if it is young tender ham with a mild cure flavor. For that reason, every housewife should know a number of ways to serve it; not only for dinner or breakfast, but for luncheons, parties picnics and lighter repasts of all kinds. The "60 Ways" campaign will serve to increase the enjoyment of those who like good ham.

Every dealer will be linked with this campaign as it appears in the Review-Tribune.

Ship's Hard Luck Trip Leads Crew to Belief It Harbored Jonah

CAPE TOWN.—The steamer Port Augustus recently put into Dorban with a tale of so much misfortune that her crew suspect they have a "Jonah" aboard, or, in landlubber's language, one who brings ill-luck to ships.

The vessel carried in the first instance a cargo of china clay bound for America. She had not been at sea more than 24 hours when she encountered a hurricane, and thereafter gale after gale lashed her across the Atlantic. All loose gear was carried away, the stearing gear was smashed, and her crew were deduced to prayer.

Three days later the coal gave out. There was a blinding snow-storm, and planks weer torn from the decks to keep the boilers going and every piece of furniture was used as fuel. After leaving America, a fireman was drowned, and at Wellington, New Zealand, the captain was involved in an automobile smash. At Port Kemble there was bad engine trouble, and a fireman was killed in a fall. Off New South Wales the ship ran into a terrific hurricane, which almost caused her to founder. The last piece of ill-luck occurred when the steamer was nearing Port Said, the bunkers catching fire and only being subdued with difficulty.

EAST LIVERPOOL — AMERICA'S POTTERY CENTER

Presidential Terms

The Mexican congress is considering the modification of its constitution to allow the re-election of a president for a second term of four years. It is of interest here as well as in Mexico. The problem is the same in both countries, though the background is different.

There is nothing in the United States constitution to prevent the re-election of a president time after time, for life. In practice, however, it has always been avoided, partly by the precedent set by the first president in refusing to be a candidate after his second term, and partly by the fact that the American public usually gets tired of a president after eight years, at the most, and wants a change.

In Mexico the constitutional limitation has mattered little. Presidents have usually held office indefinitely, like Diaz, or been removed by violence without much regard to their official terms. President Obregon was a notable exception in serving his full term and then peacefully yielding to a constitutional successor.

There is much to be said for a second term in either country. Four years is not enough for a good executive, who brings ability to his office and grows in it. And any executive is likely to give more disinterested service in his second term than in the first.

Helping Kids To Marry

Young English couples forbidden to marry by stern parents, or unable to gain legal consent by reason of parental absence now find a helping hand outstretched by the British government.

It is very romantic. Elopers may fly to a sort of fairiy godfather, in the person of Sir Lewis Didbin, officially known as "dean of the arches," residing in the ancient stronghold of Morton Tower. He is empowered to issue marriage licenses at his discretion in the name of the archbishop of Canterbury. It should be a glorious adventure for many a pair of persecuted lovers to seek sanctuary in that tower, where irate parents dare not molest them.

Here is a new kind of governmental paternalism. No such aid is held out for forlorn fledglings over here. Still, they do not seem to have any great difficulty in getting married, no matter what their age or status.

False Fashion News

Bobbed hair, say foreign dispatches, will soon be passe. They're letting the hair grow again in Paris. And that should settle the question for the feminine universe.

Maybe! We seem to remember having read just such wild news as this from abroad for years and years, varied only by reports that New York, next in prestige to Paris, was banning the bobs. And what came of it? Why, the bobs shorter and shorter, and more and more masculine, until it has reached a pass—or possible an impasse—where the only way you can tell whether it's a male or female sitting in the chair ahead is by running the eye down the neck and observing how far the bareness extends.

Same with skirts. Always longer skirts are forecast, and always they get shorter and shorter. Fashion prophecies used to have a 100 per cent rating. Now they are more undependable than weather prophecies. Women are getting out of hand in fashion as in other things.

Service And Profit

Henry Ford, prophesying 100 years of propsperity for America, preaches a sermon.

"The thing we must bear in mind," he says, "is service. The individual should give it in work. Organizations should give it. Service brings prosperity.

"Making money isn't important. Service is. Give service Then you can't help making money."

Mr. Ford preaches an old gospel more convincingly than most men. His parishioners appreciate the fact that he practices what he preaches. He has given service, and he has made more money than anybody else living.

It might be deduced that America will enjoy the promised century of prosperity if it, as a whole, thinks first of service.

The Art of Silence

In an address delivered by Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the Steel Trust, to young people attending a school of commerce, along with some of the customary moralizing of successful business men, are found these two gems:

"The most successful in business are those who have persistently devoted their personal time and attention to the concentration and improvement of one line of activity. In other words, 'Specialize!'-"

"The average man talks too much, especially if he has a good command of language. It is well to let the other man talk half the time."

This last statements puts a great truth conservatively. Judge Gary has arrived at his present position of wealth, eminence and power very largely by the process of letting the other man do about 99 per cent of the talking, contenting himself for the most part with a courteous "yes" or "no." He discovered long ago that the less you talk to the other fellow, the more time you have to think about what he is saying, and to see into, around and through him.

Time to get in the winters wood supply and tune up the old radio set.

NEW YORK DAYBYDAY

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Manhattan is finally awakening to horror of its hooch. It has doggedly gone it way drinking what was put before it—and no questions asked. The man who sends back salad because of a wilted lettuce leaf gulped lethal libations in strange blind pigs fearlessly.

Then a drunk hurled a waiter out of a ninth story window. A musician married a girl whose name the next morning he did not remember. A fellow who had two drinks downtown drove his car into a plate glass window to hear the crash. A policeman in his cups entered a strange house and beat up innocent guests.

And the Roaring Forties suddenly became suspicious something was wrong. It has been noticeable for some time that Broadway does not become buoyantly bunned as was its wont in what old timers are pleased to call the good old days.

There is nothing hilarious about drinking. It lapses into a befogging sort of sullenness. It smacks of overdosed dopsters who suddenly go berserk and in their frenzykill. Theatres tell of late arrivals who topple from their seats in what seems to be almost epileptic seizures.

This liquid violence is doled out in what they sell for beer as well as whisky. Men who used to go on a few days spree now and then find the spree lasts several months and they come to in a straight jacket with a fully developed case of the horrors.

Policemen used to be patient with intoxicated stragglers along the byway. Now they approach them with club unsheathed to beat them to the wailop. So many police have been taken by surprise in attack after a friendly warning that they are taking no chances.

In the meanwhile it is reported the water wagon is most popular of all gigs along the White Way. Broadway is sobering because it is frightened. Quite a number of the hotsy-totsy joints are as deserted as Aberdeen on tag dal.

There is the story of a bartender who deserted a piggery and opened across the street to brisk business. The former employer watched the parade of former patrons and tried to drown his sorrow with some of his own liquid cheer.

"Look what I done for him," he said as tears welled. "I took him off a dish washing job, made him my bartender, taught him to short-vhange drunks. Now look at him. It ain't right," he broke down in a grand boohoo, "and the Lord just won't let him prosper."

The Vaudeville News, a weekly catering to the tastes of the membership of the N. V. A., has a free want ad department and among the artists seeking engagements are: An English Johnny comedian, a comedian of boob type, an Irish piper, a Rube character, a fast novelty dance team, a straight man singer, a girl violinist and high kicker, a lady trumpet player and a vamp type ingenue.

However, the "at liberty's" and "layoffs" of vaudeville are few. Variety has become the field of all year around engagements what with big and small time circuits and the movie houses that appeal to vaudeville taste.

Landmarks pass. The Academy of Music is making way for the building Moloch. It was the musical center when 14th street was the Rialto and Mrs. August Belmont was the sole social leader. Great artists have appeared at the Academy. Jenny Lind and Patti sang there but of late years the old building has been the home of the cinema. A giant office building will be reared on the site.

Starting during the war when imports from Germany and France were not received, the Spanish top factories now supply four-fifths of the playthings for tots of Spain.

HASKIN'S LETTER

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Air Mail Service Grows.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—It is night on the plains. A whimpering breeze rustles the sage. The stars blink down on the expense beneath them. Somewhere in the murk that joins heaven and earth a coyotee serenades the void. Then silence. Again the whimpering breeze, which grows into a wind, swishing through the sage. It bears with it the sounds of hoofs, a rapid staccato. From the direction of the sound sharp streaks of flame stab the murky night. They are followed, seconds later, by the tardy reports of guns, vainly chasing the light that preceded them.

The staccato comes nearer. The noise of creaking leather mingles with the sound of galloping hoofs. A rider, silhouetted against the heavens, flies past, the fringe on his arms and legs streaming with the wind, the broad brim of his hat blown flat against his forehead. Behind him rides a weird band. Their feathered heads and naked bodies are bent low over their mounts, as if they were part of them. The stacco grows fainter, the streaks of flame disappear into the night, the reports die on the loneliness. Perhaps the band rides back with a grisly trophy hanging on the leader's belt; perhaps it rides back discomfited; perhaps it rides back pursued by many riders like the one that had gone before, or perhaps it does not ride back at all. The rider was the mail carrier of 60 years ago; this was the pony express.

It is night once more on the plains, but at regular intervals lights break through the murk. There is a string of them, stretching thousands of miles, not only on the plains, but across hills, moutains, and rivers. Every 250 miles they revolve like the beacons of lighthouses. The breeze now bears with it a new staccato, more rapid and louder than the hoofs of many years ago. The staccato changes to a roar.' Now silhouetted against the heavens is a gigantic bird. Sharp streaks of flame stab from it, but they are not the shots of guns. The roar dies in the night, but the lights continue to revolve. The gigantic bird is the new mail carrier. This is the air mail.

Airman Were Pioneers.

The air mail is an astonishing experiment that has proved itself. Its inception was as adventurous as that of the pony express. There were no red marauders to attack it, but it was dangerous in itself. When those daventurous airmen set sail to transport mail through the air they were as much explorers as Columbus and Eric, as truly pioneers as Boone and Crockett. But they have succeeded, and, although the experiment is far from completion, they have brought San Francisco within 34 hours of New York by mail.

The air mail was established in 1918. It began with a route between Washington and New Yor. It grew and later on independent and disconnected routes between such points as Cleveland and Chicago, New York and Cleveland, Chicago and Omaha, and Chicago and St. Louis, were established. These routes were not long enough to offer any marked advantage over the train in the transportation of mail. The air mail between Washington and New York, for instance, took two hours. It was five hours by train. Then the difficulty encountered in taking off and landing and the time required to truck the mail from the landing fields to post offices made a serious delay. When everything was over the advantage left to the air mail was only one hour. But experience was gained from these short routes which was to prove invaluable.

Followed then the relay system across the continent. The planes flew from station to station across this route by day, and during the night this mail continued in railway mail cars. The aeroplane began to prove its worth to the postal authorities. It operated with an increasing degree of efficiency, until, in the spring of 1922, it had firmly established itself.

Land Lighthouses Established.

The next question to be considered was how to continue the flight of the mail by night. It was found that this could be done and the peril of night flying greatly dissipated by the use of land lighthouses at regular intervals. After much experimentation the postal authorities made a practical application of the idea in two forms, one a large 36-inch arc and searchlight; the other an 18-inch incandescent searchlight.

In each of these two types of lights, the searchlight revolves, its beam shining horizontally, or practically so. They revolve six times a minute. The larger of the two is said to be visible on the ordinary night for more than 150 miles, while the smaller is visible for more than 40 miles. The larger lights are placed at intervals of 250 miles, and the smaller ones at 25-mile intervals. The larger ones are mounted on high, substantial towers, the smaller on ordinary windmill towers, 50 to 60 feet in height.

The big lights are placed on previously established landing fields, while the smaller ones are placed on emergency fields which the Post Office department has been able to rent. These latter are opeerated from independent plants, each of them being in charge of a man whose sole duty is to care, maintain, and operate the light.

Around the fields are border lights, showing the aviator the extent of the grounds he is to land on. There are also, at 3-mile intervals across the air mail route, small, flickering actylene lights, much like those seen on country roads, which shine directly upward and flash at the rate of more than 100 times a minute. These serve to keep the pilot on his route between emergency fields and each of them is placed as near as possible to a suitable landing field in the vicinity.

The air mail system is spreading its lines al over the country. There are eight tentative routes announced upon which bids have been asked: Boston, by Hartford, to New York and return; Chicago, by Indianapolis, Louisville, and Nashville, to Birmingham, and return; Chicago, by LaCrosse, to St. Paul and Minneapolis, and return; Chicago, by Moline, St. Joseph, Kansas City, Wichita, and Oklahoma City, to Dallas and Fort Worth, and return; Chicago, by Springfield, to St. Louis, and reteurn; Klko, Nevada, by Boise City to Pasco, Washington and return; Salt Lake City, by Las Vegas, Nevada, to Los Angeles and return; Seattle, by Portland and Medford, Oregon, Sacremento, San Francisco, and Bakersfield, to Los Angeles and return.

These were decided upon as striking the salient centers in various sections of the country. New routes will be advertised as soon as petitions are received for them and their fensibility decided upon.

Three-wheeled mail-delivery cars have been put into service by the German Postal Service.

White spun Angora rabbit hair is to be introduced into this country by a French firm.

The Story Of A Girl Who Dared

By Edgar Doe Norris

CHAPTER 57.

The first to pay particular attention to the absence of Amoura from the parade in the salon was La Houbierre herself. When, at 1 o'clock she had seen nothing of the mannequin who had in the last two days become a personage in the establishment, she went back to inquire about her. There was no news in the dressing or designing rooms, of course.

"Phone Miss Ainsworth's — Miss Ainsley's apartment. She may be ill," Madame instructed one of the designers, and departed for Marguery's for luncheon.

Two hours later, when Madame returned, after an unusually long chat over food with her friend Marguery, the designer came to her to report: "Miss Ainsworth's apartment did not answer. I inquired at the office, and the housekeeper said she remembered seeing her leave about half past ten."

Madame shrugged. "Perhaps she was called to the theater." Warm with Monsieur Marguery's wine, from his treasured stock of Pol Roger 1911, she went into her study to primp for the afternoon session.

At 4 o'clock she thought of Amoura again. "Call Monsieur Van Pugh," she told her secretary, "and inquire if Miss Ainsworth—Miss Ainsley, I mean, has been at the theater today."

The secretary came back shaking her head. Madame frowned. Had the heiress deserted her? Only yesterday Amoura had told her that she intended to remain at La Houbierre's and Madame had been secretly overjoyed and openly pleased, because of the incidental publicity. Now she began to feel a feminine fear for the safety of her employe.

"Perhaps," she thought aloud, "she has been injured. Possibly knocked down by an auto, and taken to a hospital. Or even killed." Alarmed, she told the secretary to call the police and inquire if an unidentified young woman of Amoura's description had been injured in an accident. She paced the floor while the secretary, Miss Smith, a prim and precise individual, was at the telephone.

"No, Madame, they have no record of an injured person of that description." Miss Smith had a suggestion of her own, "She may have gone riding with one of her gentlemen friends."

La Houbierre regarded the secretary deprecatingly. She didn't see why Amoura should steal off without a word for any reason.

"She probably will appear at the theater this evening," Miss Smith suggested.

La Houbierre shrugged doubtfully. "I suppose so." She went back to her rounds among the patrons.

At 8 o'clock that evening, La Houbierre was called to the telephone. Papa Houbierre, rising courteously, regarded his wife suspiciously as she left the dinner table, and called the maid to him. When Madame was out of hearing, he asked: "Un homme, Marie?"

"Oui, monsieur," Papa Houbierre nodded, and sat down thoughtfully.

Meanwhile La Houbierre was connected with Hans Van Pugh.

"Then you have not seen her, Madame?"

"No, monsieur. She was absent all day. I inquired after her this afternoon, but she was not at her apartment house."

"Nor is she now. My stage manager says he hasn't had a word from her. I told him to send some one out to the apartment.'

"Oh, I'm afraid something has happened to her."

"I'll get in touch with the police."

The august chief of police himself was called from his family fireside by Hans Van Pugh. When he had heard what the producer had to say, he laughed slyly and asked, "Just between you and me, is this sort of a publicity stunt?"

"Absolutely not! As you may have read in the papers, she's the hit of a burlesque scene in my new show, and her unexpected absence smashes it for tonight, just when the show is getting going good. I'm sure, chief, that something has happened to her."

"Allright, I'll look into it."

The chief phoned the captain of the Loop precinct, made a few succinct remarks, and went back to his newspaper and the comic strips.

Twenty minutes later Mill McGargle, police reporter of the Morning American, called his city editor. "Say, Mac, headquarters has a report that the Ainsley girl, the heiress and so forth, who is in Hans Van Pugh's show, is missing. Been gone all day, and wasn't on hand for the performance tonight."

"What is it, Bill, a press agent story?"

"Dunno. Cap got his dope from the chief direct."

"Hm. Well, look around, and see what's in it. What's the News doing?"

"Conny, whose handling headquarters for them tonight, is heavily involved in a poker game, and hasn't got hold of the tip yet."

"Well, hop to it."

The city editor clicked up the receiver and called an office boy. "Son, get the lead out of your legs, and get me all the dope there is in the morgue on—wait." He wrote out the name on a slip of paper. "You're so dumb, son, you'd forget it before you got in there." With that he turned back to the sheath of "copy" before him.

Bill McGargle taxied to Eden Gardens and sought out his friend, Joe Cobbley, press agent extraordinary to Hans Van Pugh. "Out with it, Joe, is this Ainsley disappearance a frame-up? When is she going to have her diamonds stolen?"

Joe scowled. "Frameup hell! We were left flat tonight. Shoved in an untotored girl in her part who proved a fliv, and the burlesque act died, whereas it has been the hit of the show."

"No kidding, Joe?"

"Dammit, Bill, no. That's the straight dope."

"All right. What's your private theory?"

"Damned if I know. I went out to her apartment tonight in a rush. Housekeeper let me in. Clothes and everything there. Also traveling bags. Doesn't look to me like she skipped.

"Well, who'd she go out with last night?" Bill winked.

"There's an idea!" They interviewed the doorkeeper. He remembered faintly having seen a man in a limousine meet her. He had never seen the man before. Couldn't describe him. Didn't remember license number of limousine.

"Probably sleeping off a boozey head," Bill suggested."

"No, not that kind of a girl."

Bill was thoughtful a moment, his curiosity fuming. Perhaps some big local name was involved. Whew, what a scandal story! He went to the telephone and called the editor again. "Say, Mac, Joe Cobbley swears up and down and around again that this Ainsley disappearance isn't a frame-up."

"Gotta hunch?"

"She might be stiff to the gills somewhere, but Joe says she doesn't drink and hasn't any queer friends. Never can tell, she might have been snatched away by some kidnaping fiend." It was a wild thought. "Been a lot in the papers about her money, you know."

"Well, hop on it, Bill. Give the rewrite desk all the dope you've got, and get them to read you what clippings we got. I'll send somebody over to headquarters, and you stick to this and see it out."

So Bill McGargle got on the trail of the missing heiress.

"Good to the last drop"

How this rare blend from the old South has become America's largest selling high grade coffee

Years ago the Maxwell House of Nashville, Tennessee, was the most celebrated hotel in the old South. It was the headquarters of notable visitors from all parts of the country—the gathering place of the distinguished men and women of Dixie.

In that land of good living, the fame of its delicious food—and above all its coffee—was carried far and wide. Wherever the guests of the Maxwell House went, they took with them the memory of this coffee—a special blend, remarkably rich and mellow.

And so the demand for Maxwell House Coffee spread to all sections of the United States. Plant after plant—six in all—had to be built to supply it to those critical families who insist upon the finest of everything for their tables.

Today this same blend which first delighted the old South years ago, is the favorite in most of America's leading cities. It has pleased more people than any other coffee ever put on the market.

When you first enjoy its mellow smoothness, its rich fragrance, you will understand why it has become America's largest selling high grade coffee. Serve it for breakfast—tomorrow! The Mexican congress is considering the modification of its constitution to allow the re-election of a president for a second term of four years. It is of interest here as well as in Mexico. The problem is the same in both countries, though the background is different.

There is nothing in the United States constitution to prevent the re-election of a president time after time, for life. In practice, however, it has always been avoided, partly by the precedent set by the first president in refusing to be a candidate after his second term, and partly by the fact that the American public usually gets tired of a president after eight years, at the most, and wants a change.

In Mexico the constitutional limitation has mattered little. Presidents have usually held office indefinitely, like Diaz, or been removed by violence without much regard to their official terms. President Obregon was a notable exception in serving his full term and then peacefully yielding to a constitutional successor.

There is much to be said for a second term in either country. Four years is not enough for a good executive, who brings ability to his office and grows in it. And any executive is likely to give more disinterested service in his second term than in the first.

Helping Kids To Marry

Young English couples forbidden to marry by stern parents, or unable to gain legal consent by reason of parental absence now find a helping hand outstretched by the British government.

It is very romantic. Elopers may fly to a sort of fairiy godfather, in the person of Sir Lewis Didbin, officially known as "dean of the arches," residing in the ancient stronghold of Morton Tower. He is empowered to issue marriage licenses at his discretion in the name of the archbishop of Canterbury. It should be a glorious adventure for many a pair of persecuted lovers to seek sanctuary in that tower, where irate parents dare not molest them.

Here is a new kind of governmental paternalism. No such aid is held out for forlorn fledglings over here. Still, they do not seem to have any great difficulty in getting married, no matter what their age or status.

False Fashion News

Bobbed hair, say foreign dispatches, will soon be passe. They're letting the hair grow again in Paris. And that should settle the question for the feminine universe.

Maybe! We seem to remember having read just such wild news as this from abroad for years and years, varied only by reports that New York, next in prestige to Paris, was banning the bobs. And what came of it? Why, the bobs shorter and shorter, and more and more masculine, until it has reached a pass—or possible an impasse—where the only way you can tell whether it's a male or female sitting in the chair ahead is by running the eye down the neck and observing how far the bareness extends.

Same with skirts. Always longer skirts are forecast, and always they get shorter and shorter. Fashion prophecies used to have a 100 per cent rating. Now they are more undependable than weather prophecies. Women are getting out of hand in fashion as in other things.

Service And Profit

Henry Ford, prophesying 100 years of propsperity for America, preaches a sermon.

"The thing we must bear in mind," he says, "is service. The individual should give it in work. Organizations should give it. Service brings prosperity.

"Making money isn't important. Service is. Give service Then you can't help making money."

Mr. Ford preaches an old gospel more convincingly than most men. His parishioners appreciate the fact that he practices what he preaches. He has given service, and he has made more money than anybody else living.

It might be deduced that America will enjoy the promised century of prosperity if it, as a whole, thinks first of service.

The Art of Silence

In an address delivered by Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the Steel Trust, to young people attending a school of commerce, along with some of the customary moralizing of successful business men, are found these two gems:

"The most successful in business are those who have persistently devoted their personal time and attention to the concentration and improvement of one line of activity. In other words, 'Specialize!'-"

"The average man talks too much, especially if he has a good command of language. It is well to let the other man talk half the time."

This last statements puts a great truth conservatively. Judge Gary has arrived at his present position of wealth, eminence and power very largely by the process of letting the other man do about 99 per cent of the talking, contenting himself for the most part with a courteous "yes" or "no." He discovered long ago that the less you talk to the other fellow, the more time you have to think about what he is saying, and to see into, around and through him.

NEW YORK DAYBYDAY

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Manhattan is finally awakening to horror of its hooch. It has doggedly gone it way drinking what was put before it—and no questions asked. The man who sends back salad because of a wilted lettuce leaf gulped lethal libations in strange blind pigs fearlessly.

Then a drunk hurled a waiter out of a ninth story window. A musician married a girl whose name the next morning he did not remember. A fellow who had two drinks downtown drove his car into a plate glass window to hear the crash. A policeman in his cups entered a strange house and beat up innocent guests.

And the Roaring Forties suddenly became suspicious something was wrong. It has been noticeable for some time that Broadway does not become buoyantly bunned as was its wont in what old timers are pleased to call the good old days.

There is nothing hilarious about drinking. It lapses into a befogging sort of sullenness. It smacks of overdosed dopsters who suddenly go berserk and in their frenzykill. Theatres tell of late arrivals who topple from their seats in what seems to be almost epileptic seizures.

This liquid violence is doled out in what they sell for beer as well as whisky. Men who used to go on a few days spree now and then find the spree lasts several months and they come to in a straight jacket with a fully developed case of the horrors.

Policemen used to be patient with intoxicated stragglers along the byway. Now they approach them with club unsheathed to beat them to the wailop. So many police have been taken by surprise in attack after a friendly warning that they are taking no chances.

In the meanwhile it is reported the water wagon is most popular of all gigs along the White Way. Broadway is sobering because it is frightened. Quite a number of the hotsy-totsy joints are as deserted as Aberdeen on tag dal.

There is the story of a bartender who deserted a piggery and opened across the street to brisk business. The former employer watched the parade of former patrons and tried to drown his sorrow with some of his own liquid cheer.

"Look what I done for him," he said as tears welled. "I took him off a dish washing job, made him my bartender, taught him to short-vhange drunks. Now look at him. It ain't right," he broke down in a grand boohoo, "and the Lord just won't let him prosper."

The Vaudeville News, a weekly catering to the tastes of the membership of the N. V. A., has a free want ad department and among the artists seeking engagements are: An English Johnny comedian, a comedian of boob type, an Irish piper, a Rube character, a fast novelty dance team, a straight man singer, a girl violinist and high kicker, a lady trumpet player and a vamp type ingenue.

However, the "at liberty's" and "layoffs" of vaudeville are few. Variety has become the field of all year around engagements what with big and small time circuits and the movie houses that appeal to vaudeville taste.

Landmarks pass. The Academy of Music is making way for the building Moloch. It was the musical center when 14th street was the Rialto and Mrs. August Belmont was the sole social leader. Great artists have appeared at the Academy. Jenny Lind and Patti sang there but of late years the old building has been the home of the cinema. A giant office building will be reared on the site.

Starting during the war when imports from Germany and France were not received, the Spanish top factories now supply four-fifths of the playthings for tots of Spain.

HASKIN'S LETTER

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Air Mail Service Grows.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—It is night on the plains. A whimpering breeze rustles the sage. The stars blink down on the expense beneath them. Somewhere in the murk that joins heaven and earth a coyotee serenades the void. Then silence. Again the whimpering breeze, which grows into a wind, swishing through the sage. It bears with it the sounds of hoofs, a rapid staccato. From the direction of the sound sharp streaks of flame stab the murky night. They are followed, seconds later, by the tardy reports of guns, vainly chasing the light that preceded them.

The staccato comes nearer. The noise of creaking leather mingles with the sound of galloping hoofs. A rider, silhouetted against the heavens, flies past, the fringe on his arms and legs streaming with the wind, the broad brim of his hat blown flat against his forehead. Behind him rides a weird band. Their feathered heads and naked bodies are bent low over their mounts, as if they were part of them. The stacco grows fainter, the streaks of flame disappear into the night, the reports die on the loneliness. Perhaps the band rides back with a grisly trophy hanging on the leader's belt; perhaps it rides back discomfited; perhaps it rides back pursued by many riders like the one that had gone before, or perhaps it does not ride back at all. The rider was the mail carrier of 60 years ago; this was the pony express.

It is night once more on the plains, but at regular intervals lights break through the murk. There is a string of them, stretching thousands of miles, not only on the plains, but across hills, moutains, and rivers. Every 250 miles they revolve like the beacons of lighthouses. The breeze now bears with it a new staccato, more rapid and louder than the hoofs of many years ago. The staccato changes to a roar. Now silhouetted against the heavens is a gigantic bird. Sharp streaks of flame stab from it, but they are not the shots of guns. The roar dies in the night, but the lights continue to revolve. The gigantic bird is the new mail carrier. This is the air mail.

Airman Were Pioneers.

The air mail is an astonishing experiment that has proved itself. Its inception was as adventurous as that of the pony express. There were no red marauders to attack it, but it was dangerous in itself. When those daventurous airmen set sail to transport mail through the air they were as much explorers as Columbus and Eric, as truly pioneers as Boone and Crockett. But they have succeeded, and, although the experiment is far from completion, they have brought San Francisco within 34 hours of New York by mail.

The air mail was established in 1918. It began with a route between Washington and New Yor. It grew and later on independent and disconnected routes between such points as Cleveland and Chicago, New York and Cleveland, Chicago and Omaha, and Chicago and St. Louis, were established. These routes were not long enough to offer any marked advantage over the train in the transportation of mail. The air mail between Washington and New York, for instance, took two hours. It was five hours by train. Then the difficulty encountered in taking off and landing and the time required to truck the mail from the landing fields to post offices made a serious delay. When everything was over the advantage left to the air mail was only one hour. But experience was gained from these short routes which was to prove invaluable.

Followed then the relay system across the continent. The planes flew from station to station across this route by day, and during the night this mail continued in railway mail cars. The aeroplane began to prove its worth to the postal authorities. It operated with an increasing degree of efficiency, until, in the spring of 1922, it had firmly established itself.

Land Lighthouses Established.

The next question to be considered was how to continue the flight of the mail by night. It was found that this could be done and the peril of night flying greatly dissipated by the use of land lighthouses at regular intervals. After much experimentation the postal authorities made a practical application of the idea in two forms, one a large 36-inch arc and searchlight; the other an 18-inch incandescent searchlight.

In each of these two types of lights, the searchlight revolves, its beam shining horizontally, or practically so. They revolve six times a minute. The larger of the two is said to be visible on the ordinary night for more than 150 miles, while the smaller is visible for more than 40 miles. The larger lights are placed at intervals of 250 miles, and the smaller ones at 25-mile intervals. The larger ones are mounted on high, substantial towers, the smaller on ordinary windmill towers, 50 to 60 feet in height.

The big lights are placed on previously established landing fields, while the smaller ones are placed on emergency fields which the Post Office department has been able to rent. These latter are opeerated from independent plants, each of them being in charge of a man whose sole duty is to care, maintain, and operate the light.

Around the fields are border lights, showing the aviator the extent of the grounds he is to land on. There are also, at 3-mile intervals across the air mail route, small, flickering actylene lights, much like those seen on country roads, which shine directly upward and flash at the rate of more than 100 times a minute. These serve to keep the pilot on his route between emergency fields and each of them is placed as near as possible to a suitable landing field in the vicinity.

The air mail system is spreading its lines al over the country. There are eight tentative routes announced upon which bids have been asked: Boston, by Hartford, to New York and return; Chicago, by Indianapolis, Louisville, and Nashville, to Birmingham, and return; Chicago, by LaCrosse, to St. Paul and Minneapolis, and return; Chicago, by Moline, St. Joseph, Kansas City, Wichita, and Oklahoma City, to Dallas and Fort Worth, and return; Chicago, by Springfield, to St. Louis, and reteurn; Klko, Nevada, by Boise City to Pasco, Washington and return; Salt Lake City, by Las Vegas, Nevada, to Los Angeles and return; Seattle, by Portland and Medford, Oregon, Sacremento, San Francisco, and Bakersfield, to Los Angeles and return.

These were decided upon as striking the salient centers in various sections of the country. New routes will be advertised as soon as petitions are received for them and their fensibility decided upon.

Three-wheeled mail-delivery cars have been put into service by the German Postal Service.

SURRENDER
The Story Of A Girl Who Dared

By Edgar Doe Norris

CHAPTER 57.

The first to pay particular attention to the absence of Amoura from the parade in the salon was La Houbierre herself. When, at 1 o'clock she had seen nothing of the mannequin who had in the last two days become a personage in the establishment, she went back to inquire about her. There was no news in the dressing or designing rooms, of course.

"Phone Miss Ainsworth's — Miss Ainsley's apartment. She may be ill," Madame instructed one of the designers, and departed for Marguery's for luncheon.

Two hours later, when Madame returned, after an unusually long chat over food with her friend Marguery, the designer came to her to report: "Miss Ainsworth's apartment did not answer. I inquired at the office, and the housekeeper said she remembered seeing her leave about half past ten."

Madame shrugged. "Perhaps she was called to the theater." Warm with Monsieur Marguery's wine, from his treasured stock of Pol Roger 1911, she went into her study to primp for the afternoon session.

At 4 o'clock she thought of Amoura again. "Call Monsieur Van Pugh," she told her secretary, "and inquire if Miss Ainsworth—Miss Ainsley, I mean, has been at the theater today."

The secretary came back shaking her head. Madame frowned. Had the heiress deserted her? Only yesterday Amoura had told her that she intended to remain at La Houbierre's and Madame had been secretly overjoyed and openly pleased, because of the incidental publicity. Now she began to feel a feminine fear for the safety of her employe.

"Perhaps," she thought aloud, "she has been injured. Possibly knocked down by an auto, and taken to a hospital. Or even killed." Alarmed, she told the secretary to call the police and inquire if an unidentified young woman of Amoura's description had been injured in an accident. She paced the floor while the secretary, Miss Smith, a prim and precise individual, was at the telephone.

"No, Madame, they have no record of an injured person of that description." Miss Smith had a suggestion of her own, "She may have gone riding with one of her gentlemen friends."

La Houbierre regarded the secretary deprecatingly. She didn't see why Amoura should steal off without a word for any reason.

"She probably will appear at the theater this evening," Miss Smith suggested.

La Houbierre shrugged doubtfully. "I suppose so." She went back to her rounds among the patrons.

At 8 o'clock that evening, La Houbierre was called to the telephone. Papa Houbierre, rising courteously, regarded his wife suspiciously as she left the dinner table, and called the maid to him. When Madame was out of hearing, he asked: "Un homme, Marie?"

"Oui, monsieur," Papa Houbierre nodded, and sat down thoughtfully.

Meanwhile La Houbierre was connected with Hans Van Pugh.

"Then you have not seen her, Madame?"

"No, monsieur. She was absent all day. I inquired after her this afternoon, but she was not at her apartment house."

"Nor is she now. My stage manager says he hasn't had a word from her. I told him to send some one out to the apartment.'

"Oh, I'm afraid something has happened to her."

"I'll get in touch with the police."

The august chief of police himself was called from his family fireside by Hans Van Pugh. When he had heard what the producer had to say, he laughed slyly and asked, "Just between you and me, is this sort of a publicity stunt?"

"Absolutely not! As you may have read in the papers, she's the hit of a burlesque scene in my new show, and her unexpected absence smashes it for tonight, just when the show is getting going good. I'm sure, chief, that something has happened to her."

"Allright, I'll look into it."

The chief phoned the captain of the Loop precinct, made a few succinct remarks, and went back to his newspaper and the comic strips.

Twenty minutes later Mill McGargle, police reporter of the Morning American, called his city editor. "Say, Mac, headquarters has a report that the Ainsley girl, the heiress and so forth, who is in Hans Van Pugh's show, is missing. Been gone all day, and wasn't on hand for the performance tonight."

"What is it, Bill, a press agent story?"

"Dunno. Cap got his dope from the chief direct."

"Hm. Well, look around, and see what's in it. What's the News doing?"

"Conny, whose handling headquarters for them tonight, is heavily involved in a poker game, and hasn't got hold of the tip yet."

"Well, hop to it."

The city editor clicked up the receiver and called an office boy. "Son, get the lead out of your legs, and get me all the dope there is in the morgue on—wait." He wrote out the name on a slip of paper. "You're so dumb, son, you'd forget it before you got in there." With that he turned back to the sheath of "copy" before him.

Bill McGargle taxied to Eden Gardens and sought out his friend, Joe Cobbley, press agent extraordinary to Hans Van Pugh. "Out with it, Joe, is this Ainsley disappearance a frame-up? When is she going to have her diamonds stolen?"

Joe scowled. "Frameup hell! We were left flat tonight. Shoved in an untotored girl in her part who proved a fliv, and the burlesque act died, whereas it has been the hit of the show."

"No kidding, Joe?"

"Dammit, Bill, no. That's the straight dope."

"All right. What's your private theory?"

"Damned if I know. I went out to her apartment tonight in a rush. Housekeeper let me in. Clothes and everything there. Also traveling bags. Doesn't look to me like she skipped.

"Well, who'd she go out with last night?" Bill winked.

"There's an idea!" They interviewed the doorkeeper. He remembered faintly having seen a man in a limousine meet her. He had never seen the man before. Couldn't describe him. Didn't remember license number of limousine.

"Probably sleeping off a boozey head," Bill suggested.

"No, not that kind of a girl."

Bill was thoughtful a moment, his curiosity fuming. Perhaps some big local name was involved. Whew, what a scandal story! He went to the telephone and called the editor again. "Say, Mac, Joe Cobbley swears up and down and around again that this Ainsley disappearance isn't a frame-up."

"Gotta hunch?"

"She might be stiff to the gills somewhere, but Joe says she doesn't drink and hasn't any queer friends. Never can tell, she might have been snatched away by some kidnaping fiend." It was a wild thought. "Been a lot in the papers about her money, you know."

"Well, hop on it, Bill. Give the rewrite desk all the dope you've got, and get them to read you what clippings we got. I'll send somebody over to headquarters, and you stick to this and see it out."

So Bill McGargle got on the trail of the missing heiress.

"Good to the last drop"

How this rare blend from the old South has become America's largest selling high grade coffee

Years ago the Maxwell House of Nashville, Tennessee, was the most celebrated hotel in the old South. It was the headquarters of notable visitors from all parts of the country—the gathering place of the distinguished men and women of Dixie.

In that land of good living, the fame of its delicious food—and above all its coffee—was carried far and wide. Wherever the guests of the Maxwell House went, they took with them the memory of this coffee—a special blend, remarkably rich and mellow.

And so the demand for Maxwell House Coffee spread to all sections of the United States. Plant after plant—six in all—had to be built to supply it to those critical families who insist upon the finest of everything for their tables.

Today this same blend which first delighted the old South years ago, is the favorite in most of America's leading cities. It has pleased more people than any other coffee ever put on the market.

SOCIETY

Ladies' Aid Society Gives Dinner For Winners in Contest

The annual banquet given for members of the Ladies' Aid society of the Orchard Grove Avenue Methodist Episcopal church was held last evening in the church social rooms, when the three losing circles in a recent contest entertained the winners, with Mrs. Hubert Hunt and Mrs. Fred Pollock as the leaders. This circle raised the largest sum of money during the year.

The losing teams, with Mrs. H. Dan Smith, Mrs. Will Wilson and Mrs. Lee Cooper as leaders, served dinner at 6 o'clock, at the table were seated 45 guests, being in the shape of a large horseshoe. The winners occupied the honor positions at the middle of the horseshoe. Marigolds, asters, dahlias and many other fall flowers were used profusely in decorating the banquet hall. Miss Freda Barlow was the pianist.

Following the dinner, a report was made by the secretary, Mrs. Lee Weikart, after which short talks were given by each circle leader. During the business session Mrs. Charles Shope was re-elected president for the fifth term. Mrs. Will Wilson was chosen vice president, and Mrs. Lee Weikart, secretary-treasurer.

Plans for the work of the coming year were discussed.

Turk-Nash Sales Co. Will Introduce New Ajax Car Here

Announcement was made today by officials of the Ajax Motors company, Racine, Wis., Nash Motors subsidiary, that the new Ajax will be formally introduced to the East Liverpool public in the near future. "Seldom in the history of the industry has the arrival of a new motor car been awaited with the eagerness that characterizes local interest in the coming of the Ajax. And if the record-breaking enthusiasm manifested in the cities near the home factory where it is now on exhibition is any criterion then the Ajax unveiling here will draw the greatest crowds that ever flocked to see a new car," states Turk-Nash Sales company, East Liverpool Ajax distributors.

"Opinion throughout the industry and among those who have had opportunity to view the car in those towns adjacent to the factory where it is on display unhesitatingly pronounces the new Ajax the crowning achievement of C. W. Nash. It is said to be a car of such highly developed character in respect to both body design and engineering features that it will take rank at once as a contribution to motor car progress of distinct and vital importance.

"In order to give the Ajax every advantage of the finest production facilities the entire Ajax plant was completely remodeled to conform to the latest accepted ideas for fine motor car manufacture and all the equipment, tools and mechanical devices were bought new and they are of the most modern character available. Everything considered probably no car has ever made its bow to buyers under more auspicious circumstances nor with brighter outlook for achieving a tremendous popular success."

'DEATH VALLEY' SCOTT BOBS UP

Mystery Man of Mojave is Worth $2,000,000.

LOS ANGELES — "Death Valley" Walter Scott, mystery man of the Mojave, California desert who 20 years ago chartered and himself piloted a special train to Chicago from the coast in the record time of 44 hours and a few minutes is back today at his home in the drifting sands, following his first visit to Los Angeles in seven years.

And in his wake Scott left a more mysterious trail than ever.

For he came to the city with all his pockets bulging with big bills, as he did 20 years ago.

When "Death Valley" Scott visited Los Angeles in 1905 and chartered his famous special train he had $120,000 with him. The train cost $10,000 and Scott squandered the balance during his Eastern visit.

Scott admitted he has today $2,000,000 in property holdings adding "but one such stunt as I pulled in 1905 is enough in any man's lifetime."

Scott's fortune comes from some spot near his desert home.

Just how he makes his money no one knows but year after year he has added to his fortune and his wealth is said to be almost limitless.

At present Scott is building a million-dollar residence. The home is now about two-thirds finished according to Scott, and is built entirely of concrete and steel.

A chimney 330 feet tall, was leveled by exploding dynamite at the base, in Darford, England, recently.

Corn Kept Her Awake Like a Toothache Till Her Sister Told This Remedy

Miss Josie Sansbury, 810 Prospect St., Indianapolis, told the reporter her experience as follows:

"I had a corn that pained like a toothache. I would wake up in the night from the pain. Then my sister told me to be sure and get some 'Blue-jay' Corn Plasters, for she had used them with such success.

"I put on 'Blue-jay', and 24 hours after soaked the plaster off and the corn came right out. That was over a year ago, and I haven't had a corn since. I have recommended them to many of my friends and everyone who tried them says the plasters removed their corns."

Anyone who will follow the simple directions on the package can get instant relief and in two days be rid of the corn.

Liquid corn remedies cannot keep the pressure of the shoe off the corn as "Blue-jay" Plasters do. And you can stretch the soft-felt "Blue-jay" Plaster pad to fit around any sized corn. It's attached to an adhesive strip that holds it right on the corn. Hence the "Blue-jay" preparation centered in the pad goes right to the right spot and nowhere else.

The dose is ready measured—not too much, not too little—to remove the corn. You can never be sure of the right amount in dropping a liquid on a corn. So we recommend "Blue-jay" Plasters in preference to any liquid, even our own. Demand is so great all druggists carry "Blue-jay." Package of six only 25c.

TIRE COMPANY IS BANKRUPT

Appraisers Visit East End Plant to Fix Value.

The plant of the Pittsburgh Rubber company, East End, against which a petition in involuntary bankruptcy was filed in the U. S. district court at Cleveland about ten days ago, is being appraised today.

The appraisers are H. A. Middleton, former head of the McLean Tire & Rubber company, which operated the plant for several years; E. H. Cunningham and C. E. Kidder.

The plant, which was built about 12 years ago by the Morgan & Marshall Tire and Rubber company, was taken over last May by W. S. and G. B. Thomas, brothers, of Wooster, who organized the Pittsburgh Tire & Rubber company. It was leased from the bondholders who bought it from C. V. Beatty, receiver for the McLean Tire & Rubber company about a year ago.

The company ceased operations on Saturday, Sept. 5. Five trucks owned by a Pittsburgh firm came to the plant on Labor day and removed all the finished tires and unfinished stock. About 25 or 30 employes who had not been paid filed attachment proceedings against the company on the following Tuesday when the plant failed to resume operations.

Attorney Blaine H. Cochran of this city has been named by the United States district court as receiver for the company.

"I am," replied Heinen. "The most significant testimony of Lieut. Anderson, aerological officer aboard the Shenandoah was when he said he saw the weather going against the wind direction. ever even looked at my airplane. They were interested only in the clothing of the enlisted men, in saluting, and the cleanliness of my kitchen and barracks."

Mr. President and readers generally what would you think of eleven generals, responsible for the welfare of a graet express train, if they confined themselves to inspecting the uniforms of Pullman conductors or porters, and the cleanliness of the dining car, and never asked a question about the locomotive.

This nation needs an air force controlled by men that understand flying, men that are interested in the differnce btween an all metal monoplane and a weak cloth made biplane, more than in neat uniforms, or servile saluting.

Providence, taking care of the birds, put in charge of them the brains of birds, not the brains of rabbits or turtles.

Why should this nation, depending for its ——— in war, upon flying machines and flying men, put the nation's flying department under the control of human rabbits from the navy or turtles from the army?

Not far from the train on which this is written in Arkansas City, Kans., there lives a dog, name unknown, and all the rest of his life that dog will believe in mircales.

His owner, probably dead by this time, was Warren Hardy, man of quick temper. Seizing his shotgun by the end of the barrel, Hardy hit the dog with the butt. Neither he nor the dog, knew the gun was loaded. Hardy is in the hospital, and probably won't recover.

All in one second the dog felt the blow, heard the explosion, saw his cruel master stretched on the ground, knowing nothing about gunpowder. That dog will always believe in miracles, and also in a special providence that avenges dogs, when they are hit with the butt end of a gun.

It is foolish, however, to say the less you understand the more readly you believe in miracles.

The radio is a genuine mircale of science, and it takes intelligence to understand it. A savage wouldn't understand it or believe in it. He would simply say "witchcraft" and go his way.

Arch Brownley wrote an admirably brief notice, pinned it to the front door of his little restaurant at Fort Smith, Arkansas, went to the back room, drank poison and died.

The farewell notice read:

"I am dead. This store will not be open today."

Too bad he died. He should have gone into the newspaper business. A dozen editorial chairs need men able to write briefly and to the point as Arch Brownley wrote in his forty-second and last year.

Fashion Display Opens

touch of gold or silver is quite new and correct, fashion leaders assert.

Silver or gold leather is being used as a trim for sport suits, velvet ensemble and evening dresses. Bands of cut out leather trim, charming velvet frocks and coats, and there could be nothing more beautiful than Veronese green velvet trimmed with silver applique in exquisite pattern.

Long Narrow Sleeves.

The fad of short sleeves or even no sleevees at all in dresses has been disregarded this year for the long narrow sleeve or those with puffs from the elbow to the wrist. Skirts, which will continue to remain short, will be flared. Among the many pretty shades are brown, wine, mulberry and cranberry. The latest names for the blues will be cracklehead and pencil.

Gold and silver tassels sometimes trim velvet and satin dresses in the darker shades with a touch of gold on the sleeve. In the jaunty afternoon frocks graded bands of silver or gold leather are used in the trim.

Differing from the small hats worn last year, millinery shops are featuring the style turned back from the face with colors matching those of the garment.

Jewels, furs and accessories are also presented for the most fastidious women, as well as fabrics for those who have skill in designing their own costumes.

Fares Are Refunded.

Sport coats for fall wear are straight and in color resemble the well known Navajo blanket. These coats are replacing those of creton which were popular for summer and early fall wear.

The Fall Display campaign is under auspices of the Retail Merchants' division of the Chamber of Commerce, which is making an extraordinary effort to have shoppers residing within a radius of 15 miles visit here during this big event.

The Fare Refunding association will refund fares to all out-of-town shoppers who comes to East Liverpool during any of the three days of the show.

Two Derrick Workers Killed.

TURKS PREPARE FOR FRESH WAR

Defy England in Dispute Over Mosul Question.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—War clouds gathered over the Near East today, with four classes of Turkish recruits, from the age of 22 to 25 called for military service, according to a message from Constantinople, and the semi-official Turkish press boldly flaunting defiance of England over the hotly disputed Mosul question.

Although the Turkish newspapers were quoted as saying the call to arms was for the purpose of national defense in the event of an attack on Turkish soil, they followed this explanation with the declaration: of the premature announcement by the French that Secretary Mellon and M. Caillaux had agreed tentatively upon an extremely lenient settlement for France, which awaited only the approval of President Coolidge to be formally ratified and reduced to writing.

"Turkey will not stand by with her arms folded and permit England to acquire Mosul for the benefit of her petrol kings."

The French were angry because of the position they were put in by a remarkable statement issued at the White House, which not only contradicted flatly what the French had announced 12 hours before, but went even further and barely stopped short of accusing the French of duplicity.

Deny French Announcement.

The French announced last night that a tentative agreement had been reached between M. Caillaux and Mr. Mellon ,under which France was to fund her debt on an easy payment plan of 68 years, paying $40 000,000 for the first five years, $60,000,000 for the next seven years, and a flat $100,000,000 annually for the next 56 years, the whole to bear an interest rate approximating 1¾ per cent.

The American statement denied this flatly and declared that no agreement had been reached and contained the remarkable assertion that "there have been no differences of opinion among the members of the American commission."

The emptiness of the American statement saying that "there were no differences of opinion whatever" among the American commissioners was strikingly illustrated within two hours after the commission left the White House, when one of the commissioners said:

"President Coolidge is standing squarely behind the majority of this commission."

"Is there a majority where no difference of opinion exists?" the commissioner was asked.

"Yes, just that," he snapped.

Places Hopes in Coolidge

PARIS, Oct. 1.—France places its hopes in President Coolidge to prevent a breakdown in the Franco-American debt negotiations.

"We have faith in President Coolidge who is alone the master of the situation," said an official of the finance ministry today, in a statement to International News Service, commenting on the impasse in negotiations which threatens in Washington.

The navy prepared to fight back today at Colonel "Billy" Mitchell's charges that "bungling amateurs" were responsible for the death of 14 persons in the Shenandoah disaster, and for the failure of the Hawaiian flight and the Arctic expedition.

The battle to clear the navy of this grave accusation was to be opened by a select list of the country's best naval pilots and airplane constructors.

There were more than 15 pilots in the list called by the board, which included Commander John Rodgers, who drew Mitchell's fire because of the unsuccessful PN-9 Honolulu flight; Captain George Steele, Commandant of the Lakehurst naval dirigible station; men who planned the navy's Arctic expedition, and members of the crew of the NC-4, first plane ever to fly across the Atlantic.

Chicagoan Named Head of National Safety Congress

CLEVELAND, Oct. 1.—Charles B. Scott, Chicago, head of the Chicago Bureau of Public Safety, was elected president of the National Safety Congress in convention here to succeed C. B. Auel, Pittsburgh.

The fourth day of the five-day safety study, was taken up today with sessions on industrial and public safety.

Carl R. Gray, president of the Union Pacific system, Omaha, Neb., who came here to participate in the safety discussions of the steam rail group, made the principal talk at last night's banquet. He surprised his listeners with some amazing vital statistics of his own board. He said, "In 1920 there were 3,120 persons killed in accidents on our roads alone. Thus far in 1925 only 271 persons have been killed on the Union Pacific."

The deaths listed were: Tokio, 3; Yokusaka, 6; Yokohama, 20.

Negro is Sentenced To Die in Electric Chair for Murder

CINCINNATI, Oct. 1.—The brutal slaying of Edna Boswell, 14-year-old Addyston school girl, committed September 16 by James Henry, 37, a Negro from Georgia, was legally avenged today. Late yesterday afternoon after the speediest murder hearing on record in Hamilton county, Henry was sentenced to death by Judges F. L. Hoffman, and S. A. Leblond. January 9, 1926, was the date set for the execution.

The sentence was passed after the two jurists had heard all of the testimony in the case, including a graphic description of the crime by the slayer who demonstrated how he had crushed the girl's skull with a sharp pointed stone after robbing her of her money.

Palmer Stripped Of Executive Power By Shipping Board

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Leigh C. Palmer, president of the Emergency Fleet corporation and central figure in the government's shipping controversy, virtually was stripped of all executive powers today by the United States shipping board.

The board by an unanimous vote repealed two resolutions, enacted a year ago, which had given Palmer authority to operate the government's fleet of merchant vessels without the board's supervision. The authority had been conferred on Palmer at President Coolidge's request.

REPORTS FROM STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Selling pressure on the motor stocks resulted in a lower level of prices for many of the active stocks in the early trading today, but recoveries were in order almost immediately, while stocks in other sections of the market forged ahead at the opening.

Dodge Brothers' spurt to a new high at 31⅞, up 2½ points, was the feature of the low-priced motor stocks, while Marland's leadership of the oils into higher price territory, and North American company's advance to above 59 emphasized the buoyant tone of the oil and utility stocks.

The unexpected reduction of the Bank of England's discount rate from 4½ to 4 per cent emphasized the firm situation in international money markets. Operations of the United States Steel corporation's mills were reported at 80 per cent of capacity, against 76 per cent last week, and prices of steel bars were firm at 2 cents a pound.

Early losses of from 1 to 3 points were easily made up as the whole market surged forward in the first hour, in response to the more favorable outlook in the money situation. Dodge Brothers' common stock ran away from hte balance of the motor list, and transactions were unusually heavy.

Marland's oil movement gained momentum as the session advanced, and reached a new high on the movement at 46 in heavy trading. Fleischmann sold above 126, a new high for the year. Railway Steel Springs jumped 8 points to 178.

Call money renewed at 5½ per cent.

The solicitor also notified the solons that the ordinance for the construction of a sanitary sewer in Hazel street would be ready for passage at the next meeting. All legislation for the Edgewood avenue sewer has been enacted, and the work on both streets will be let in the same contract.

Settle Pole Controversy

Frank Swaney, commercial manager for the Ohio Bell Telephone company, attended a caucus session of the solons, held before their open session, to discuss the proposed removal of the telephone pole which stands at the corner of Mulberry street and Pennsylvania avenue in front of the Ohio Valley Oil company's new filling station. Council expressed a desire at some time to make this curb round in which event it would be necessary to move the pole.

Swaney informed the lawmakers that his company stood ready to change the location of the pole at any time that council decided to go ahead with the improvement. This wrote finis to the controversy.

Uncle Sam Loses First Round Against Tax-Dodgers' Army

Government Collects $4,162,998 in Delinquent Taxes, But Refunds $11,137,000 Because of Illegal Assessment.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—In the first round of a nation-wide battle between taxpayers and the federal government, by which the bureau of internal revenue hopes to put 20,000,000 or more tax-dodgers on the books, the treasury took a bad beating.

Figures for August, made public today, showed that $4,162,998 had been collected in delinquent taxes against $11,137,000 refunded to taxpayers because of illegal assessment.

From June 30 to October 1, the treasury made tax refunds of over $48,000,000 compared to $39,816,000 for the same period last year.

At that rate the proceeds from all foreign debts this year will not make the refunds authorized to taxpayers by the bureau of internal revenue. Some of the refunds have been approved at the treasury and others ordered by the United States board of tax appeals and the federal courts.

"Hard-boiled" methods will be employed to collect delinquent tax, according to officials.

Deputy internal revenue collectors made 45,845 investigations resulting in additional tax of $4,854,000 in August. The collection amounted to $4,162,998.

"In many case taxpayers cannot pay in full, in which case it is necessary to enter warrants for distraint, levy upon personal property and in other ways protect the interests of the government," Blair said.

"The number of delinquents who did not make returns was 23,830, of whom 9,698 were income tax delinquents and 14,142 delinquent in the payment of miscellaneous taxes."

Most of the taxpayers referred to are of the small variety.

The number of income tax delinquents and additional collections included:

SIX BROADWAY PLAYS BOOKED

Chicago Stock Company Comes to Ceramic Next Week.

The popular Chicago Stock company is due for a week's engagement at the Ceramic theatre, starting Monday evening, Oct. 5. Of course this sterling attraction does not need any introduction or praise. As year after year it has been getting bigger and better until it now stands pre-eminent in dignified amusement circles.

During its engagement here, the company is to present six former Broadway successes, all of which have had record runs on the Great White Way and the endorsement of the critics and theatregoers alike. Each of the productions is to be given an elaborate scenic treatment and correctly costumed and acted in an artistic manner by a company seldom seen in the field of stock.

The opening attraction of the engagement Monday evening will be Irene Bordoni's former New York success, the song play, "Little Miss Bluebeard," which was written by the celebrated farceur, Avery Hopwood, author of "Up in Mabel's Room," and many other famous plays.

Other plays to be offered during the engagement will be Mark Swan's brilliant comedy, "She Walked in Her Sleep," Mary Boland's New York triumph, "Meet the Wife," the mystery thriller; "The Bat," Ina Claire's former starring vehicle; "Grounds for Divorce," and the exceptionally funny comedy, "A Bachelor's Night," which was written by Wilson Colligan, the author of "Getting Gertie's Garter."

Tom Meighan Plays Banker's Son Role In Ceramic Picture

In "The Man Who Found Himself," his latest starring production for Paramount, a prison story by Booth Tarkington, which is the photo play at Ceramic theatre Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Tom Meighan has the role of a happy-go-lucky son of a small town banker. His family is looked up to and respected in their community.

As things sometimes happen in a small town, the bank goes to the wall as a result of a "run" brought on when a rival banker, played by Frank Morgan, of stage fame, informs the bank examiner that there is some funny business going on in the Macauley bank.

It develops that Tom's younger brother, because of the insistence of his pinheaded, luxury-loving wife, had lost heavily in Wall Street, borrowed bank funds to "cover up" and then had gone to the rival banker for aid which was promised him. The other, however, takes advantage of the situation to get rid of a big business rival by informing bank officials of the irregularity.

To shield his brother, Tom goes "up the river" for a two-year stretch. His term is barely half served when word comes that Lon Morris, the crooked banker, has talked Tom's fiancee, played by Virginia Valli, into marrying him. Tom, now a trusty, skips jail to prevent the wedding but arrives on the scene just too late. He returns to finish out his term, dead set against everything and everybody.

When, finally, he is freed, his family, not knowing the sacrifice he has made for them, are horrified lest his criminal past disgrace them. They urge him to leave town, virtually turning him out. He thinks even the girl has deserted him.

Tom then realizes the truth of a brother convict that it isn't the prison itself that's so bad, it's the stigma of jail, the sinister whispers that follow him everywhere. Embittered, he determined to get revenge on the man who had "put him away." But the girl, who has always been true to him seeks him out and turns his face again toward the light.

It's a situation of great drama and heart-interest.

DOG SWALLOWS COSTLY RADIUM, THEN DIES, BUT CAPSULE IS FOUND

VIENNA—A large and costly quantity of radium has been swallowed by a dog in this city.

The animal suffered from a sore on its back and the veterinary surgeon determined on radium treatment. After the second treatment it was found that the bandage which had contained the radium capsule had disappeared.

At first it was thought that the precious atom had been stolen, but the dog quickly gave signs of great pain and died in terrible torment, having swallowed the bandage and raidum, too.

The capsule was found in the stomach.

The same order has been handed down by the court in the case of Mrs. Andy Veser, plaintiff in error against the state of Ohio as defendant in error.

Both cases originated in the court of Mayor George Russell of Salem, following the filing of charges against the plaintiffs in error for alleged violation of liquor laws. The plaintiffs are represented by Attorney Homer H. Hickling.

Granted Leave to File Answer.

E. A. Althouse has been granted until October 10 to file his answer as defendant in an action filed in common pleas court against him by John E. Smith. In this case the plaintiff seeks the recovery of $1,700 from Althouse from the sale of an automobile.

Seek Appointment.

Claiming that the former appraisement of chattles was too high, a motion has been filed in common pleas court by Metzgar & McCarty of Salem, in the case of George S. Patterson against the Salem Rubber company, asking that the court order a second appraisement. Excessive valuations have been placed upon the various chattels, according to the motion.

Demurrer Withdrawn.

The demurrer to the petition has been withdrawn in the appeal case of John Cox and Rose Cox against H. M. Aronson, doing business as Harvey Jewelry store, East Liverpool, and Judge James G. Moore has granted leave to the plaintiff to file an amended petition by October 10. This case has been carried up on appeal by the defendant from a lower court in East Liverpool, and is for a claim of $17.

Age and Youth Will Renew Struggle In World's Series

But Washington Has Been There Before and Its Capabilities and Limitations are Known; Pittsburgh is the Problem; Will Youth Climb New Heights, or Break and Falter Under Strain of the Moment?

By FORD C. FRICK.

FORD FRICK

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Youth, the sages declare, is an uncertain quantity.

How true that observation may be will be proved in the coming world series, for it will find youth embracing far flung opportunity—and age holding the breach against the onslaught.

Pittsburgh, of course, represents youth. Here is raw strength. Here are Traynor and Wright and Moore and Cuyler, carrying the banner of promise and pushing their claims for ascendency.

And Washington, therefore, must be old age and experience. Age, disillusioned by fact and unhampered by fancy; age knowing its own limitations and fighting grimly to protect itself against encroachment.

Washington, as age, has been there before. You and I and the rest of us know what Washington will do—know the capabilities and the limitations of those veterans who have established themselves through long years of battle and tense moments fraught with possibility.

Washington we know. Pittsburgh is the problem.

Will youth, battling in the fenzy of a dream in the making, find a new spirit to carry it to untold heights beyond the reach of plodding veteran experience? Will Traynor and Moore and Cuyler and Wright reach out to find new summits of baseball greatness?

Or, overawed by the glamor of a moment, greater than they have ever experienced, will they falter and break before the strain which only veteran nerves can pass untouched?

Answer that and you answer the question as to who will win the world series. Answer those problems and you answer, too, the problem which is vexing more than one baseball expert on the eve of the series.

An airplane that may be taken apart in tweny minutes and put together again in one hour has been perfected.

DEMPSEY SPARS IN CLEVELAND

Boxes Six Rounds With Three Spavined Foes.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 1.—Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion, was the attraction which packed the Olympic arena to the doors last night. He boxed six rounds with three heavyweights, none of whom could even give him an argument. Nick Neuman, and Marty Culter, both fat and heavy, in addition to Ray Newman, Dempsey's sparring partner, were the men honored. The champion was greeted with cheers, and his work in the ring applauded.

In the main bout of ten rounds, Al Walthers, Canton, was forced to quit when he broke his hand in the fourth round. After winning the first round by a wide margin, Tommy Freeman, of Hot Springs, was only saved from a knockout in the seecond by the bell, but in delivering the blow, Walthers broke his hand. The fight went on two more rounds, when Walthers' hand was examined and the injury disclosed.

Young Irish, of Akron, won the first two rounds of his bout with Harry Marcus, but the fight was stopped in the fourth when his seconds sent a towel hurtling into the ring. Marcus had him near the knockout point in the third.

BISONS TO OPEN WITH DUQUESNE

BETHANY, W. Va., Oct. 1.—Saturday afternoon on the Bethany college athletic field the Bison eleven will stage the initial battle of the season with Duquesne university. Just what kind of a showing the Bethany team will make in their initial appearance is open to much speculation but Bison followers are not at all discouraged. The Bison aerial attack this year will cause their opponents no little trouble.. Fiers, a first year man, will probably be used at left end instead of at full where he was originally slated. He has been shifted to the terminal post because of his ability to nail passes. Rhine, a rangy lad from McKeesport, Pa., will likely be at the other position. He is also very adept at handling passes. Carey, Barlow and Dimick are well able to take care of the hurling proposition.

Tinson and Wilmore, two husky linemen of 200 pounds, will bee at the tackle positions Saturday with Crawford and Griffiths at guard. Price, a first year man, will probably be at center although theree is very likely to bee a change made in favor of Scott, a Bison veteran of one season. It looks like Bobby Stobbs, former Linsly Institute star, and "Alf" Carey, Follansbee, W. Va., will be at the halves with either Barlow or Dimick at quarter and calling signals. Carl Hamill of Wheeling, another Linsley star, will be at full.

Tagging The Bases

Senators who may do no more than wear their pants shiny during the big series appeared against the Red Sox in the first game of the last series of the regular season and managed to lose, 5 to 4. Roger Peckinpaugh was in charge of the Senators-elect, while Bucky Harris remained behind in Washington.

Bob McGraw, recruit right-hander, appeared for the Dodgers against the Phillies, and though fairly parsimonious with hits, was quite wild in two instances, so the Phillies won, 6 to 4.

The other clubs enjoyed a rest.

SERIES A DISAPPOINTMENT?

Well, Water Bucket Act, Tigers and Cubs Would Improve Circus

By NORMAN E. BROWN.

Man is naturally a discontented soul, we are told.

I'm probably no exception.

I picked Washington to win the American league pennant and wasn't a bit sore when I saw that the Pirates were booked to cop the National league end.

But now as I look over the whole situation I find a lot of things wrong with it.

For instance, the Athletics would have introduced at least one novelty into the classic had they copped instead of the Senators.

They could have swelled the attendance considerably by announcing that one of the star acts would be that of Al Simmons batting with one foot in the water bucket.

Now we have had one series featured by the introduction of the pillow. Cozie Dolan introduced a trick brain in another. But we have never had a nice, shiny water bucket brought to the plate and made to do duty as a foothold for a batter.

Then there are the Giants. We got so used to seeing them in their threering act entitled "Carrying Out McGraw's Orders" that we will miss them. Jawn has 'em in a concession tent outside the gate this year—selling them at reduced prices. Take one home to the baby.

There's Eddie Rommel, too. Eddie wonders, and rightfully, too, what a pitcher has to do to get into a world's series. Rommel battled it out with the best pitchers in the league for the leadership on the mound. Maybe he can get his answer from Walter Johnson, who will tell him "Work 18 years like that."

Eddie Collins got his White Sox all darned up, washed and out on the line early this season and expected to exhibit them in the fall fair. It wasn't right to fail to send him entry blanks.

The Reds got left out, too. The government and everybody else has been hard on the Reds here lately. But Manager Hendricks has never been accused of hobnobbing with Saklatvala, the Russian envoy to the Interparliamentary union, who found all the boats rented when he tried to sail to the United States for the opening of the sessions of the union's congress.

And the Cubs. I always did like animal acts. And Owner Wrigley could have put on a good one. Have all the Cubs play hide and seek, "Find the manager," or something like that.

And Babe Ruth. Somebody overlooked a bet there. There isn't a player on either team in the series who can eat as many hot dogs between innings as Babe. Why pick on the lunch stand crew that way?

But there is one thing that makes me warm up to the series. That is that the whole thing's staged outside New York. Which will make it an educational tour for many New York fans, who still think that Indians roam the woods of Pittsburgh and miners and operators live side by side in vine-covered cottages around the tipples of the mines.

To revive farming and truck gardening in the Straits Settlements a series of fairs will be held in the near future.

SENATORS SHOW GREATER PUNCH THAN BUCS IN LATE FINISHES

By Norman E. Brown.

The Washington Senators are better "finishers" than the Pirates.

Going into the late innings with the score tie the American league entrants "come through" oftener than the National league champions.

Records of the ending big league season show this.

Up to the time that the two clubs had inched the flags in their circuits each had played in 21 games in which the score at the beginning of the seventh inning stood a tie.

Pittsburgh produced the punch to pull the game out of the fire in 10 of these contests. They failed to put over the necessary runs in 11.

Washington triumphed in 13 of the 21 games. They failed to come through in 8.

Eight of the 21 games in which the Pirates found themselves tied with their opponents in the seventh inning went into extra innings. Of these long-drawn games the Pirates won 4 and lost 4, an even break.

Nine of the seventh-inning-tie games in which Washington took part went into extra innings, and Washington won 6 of these and lost 3—a .667 average.

That the teams were about equal in defensive strength in these back to-the-wall games is indicated by the fact that the Pirate hurlers held the opposition scoreless in the late innings while their mates were putting over 8 of their 10 victories and the Washington hurlers held the opposition scoreless in 11 of the 13 victories.

According to these figures Washington will have the advantage in the world's series games, should they hold the slugging Pirates in check until the late innings.

The gameness of the Senators in tight places was the outstanding feature of the playing of that team in the 1924 series. Judging by the figures cited the team retains this gameness. The Pirates will be handicapped by their inexperience in playing under world's series tension.

Will Washington's ability to put over the big punch at the right time decide the series?

BOONE PESSIMISTIC IN OUTLOOK FOR SATURDAY

Declares Blue and White Eleven is in for Tough Battle With New Philadelphia Gridders; Superintendent McVey, However, Confident That Ceramic City Crew Will Win.

Coach O. V. Boone has assumed a characteristic Gil Dobie outlook for the Blue and White squad's chances with New Philadelphia here on Saturday following last night's workout at Patterson Field.

"They just couldn't get going," declared the Blue and White mentor, and if there's no improvement between now and Saturday, I hate to think what will happen."

He related how his reserve eleven shook up the varsity line for 24 yards in half a dozen downs or so, with the backfield being compelled to stop plays that filtered frequently through the line.

On the other hand, Superintendent McVey is nothing if not optimistic.

"We'll beat them," he declared and apparently feels quite certain of it.

However, Coach Boone is probably as confident as anyone else that the varsity machine will be running as smoothly by Saturday as it should be but desires to dissipate any feeling of overconfidence that might exist following the victory over Sebring.

At the same time, he realizes the nature of the task that confronts the team. New Philly won last year 27 to 27. They scored three touchdowns in the first quarter, but after that was held to an even break.

TRIANGLES AT CANTON SUNDAY

CANTON, Oct. 1.—Dayton Triangles will be the Canton Bulldog's opponent here Sunday afternoon. The Bulldog's Sunday pulled through their initial National league encounter in fine style, beating Rochester, N. Y., 14-7.

The Triangles have a powerful team. Last Sunday they held Rock Island, Ill., to a 0-0 tie while the week previous Rock Island tied the Bears of Chicago, one of the strongest clubs in the circuit.

Dayton has a squad of former college and sandlot players who have been playing together for several years. The have always been hard for Canton to beat, and for that reason the southwestern Ohio club is feared by the local eleven.

Pete Calac, Indian star, signed a Canton contract this week. He is a halfback and came here from Los Angeles. He will be in the lineup next Sunday.

HAMMOND PROS TORONTO FOES

Mundy and Sheehan With Tiger Eleven Sunday.

TORONTO, Oct. 1.—Local football fans are loud in praise of the work of two men from the East Liverpool sector. One of this pair is Mundy, who has held a berth with the Tigers for several seasons at end, and the other is a new man, Sheehan, from Midland.

Sheehan's work at half last Sunday won him much admiration and he is expected to make a good showing Sunday when the Tigers clash with the Hammond, Ind., Pros.

This is the game which will really test the mettle and ability of Al Nesser's group since it was none other than the Hammond eleven which beat the Chicago Cardinals.

The Hammond team includes Carman, Purdue; Fortune, Michigan; Williams, Brown; Beal, W. & J.; Crawford, Illinois; Ults, W. & J.; Dahlgren, Beloit; Tallant, Grove City; Sachs, Loyola; Kendricks, Texas A. & M.; Hess, Indiana; Gavier, Georgia Tech; Robinson, Northwestern; Curzon, Champaign; McDonald, Duluth, and Hudson, Creighton.

The line averages 193 pounds and the backfield 175. This is probably the heaviest and fastest team to be booked here, and the outcome of the game probably will have a bearing on the proposed trip of the Tigers to Atlantic City and New York later.

ORR POINT MAKER FOR MUSKINGUM

A couple of former Wellsville gridders, both of whom have a large number of friends here, got their first real taste of collegiate football last Saturday and, playing a full game, came out second best to none in that particular contest.

Clifford "Pop" Orr and Meryl Todd, two of the stars of the 1923 Orange and Black eleven, were backfield luminaries for Muskingum college eleven in Saturday's tilt with Rio Grande, which ended in a 7-7 deadlock.

Makes Night Driving SAFE

The Controllable Beam on the Better Buick
Night driving strain, the blind insecurity when you dim to keep glare out of the eyes of an approaching driver—both have been eliminated by the Controllable Beam Headlight, a feature of the Better Buick.
Daytime visibility every inch of the way! Bright light all the time! A simple control on the steering wheel lowers the beam when you near another car.
And this is only one of many 1926 improvements which Buick engineering has given to the Better Buick. 75 horsepower and more; Duotone in Duco finish; Triple Sealed Valve-in-Head engine; light-pedal-pressure clutch; approved mechanical 4-wheel brakes; and many other exclusive advancements now make the Better Buick the better car to own and drive.

W. V. U. LIGHTER THAN D.-E. SQUAD

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Oct. 1.—Statistics sent here by Davis Elkins college officials on the "Scarlet Hurricane" football squad reveal that the Mountaineer eleven is going to be outweighed by at least 10 pounds to the men Saturday when it meets the Senators from Randolph county in the new West Virginia stadium. The weight advantage may enable Davis Elkins to wear the light West Virginia team down and in that event Head Coach Ira E. Rodgers will be forced to call on reserve material to turn the Senators back.

Students in the university from Elkins and Mountaineer fans who have seen Coach "Cam" Henderson's warriors claim that weights listed on the statistic sheet sent here for the official program have been "doctored." They maintain that Captain Ellis, Lord, Harbert, Lutz, Leader, Powell, Curtis, Cain and other regulars are much heavier than quoted in the statistics.

Harry Cronin, Fairmont attorney, formerly associated with Mountaineer teams, says that "Davis Elkins has the biggest team I've ever seen since the war. Curtis, Close and Harbert are real football players." According to Cronin the Senators are in good physical condition and he is one of those who believe that Captain Mahan, McHenry, Davis and Dilcher are going to have a busy afternoon when they stack up against the "Hurricane."

Last Night's Fights

Cleveland—Al Walthers, Canton, forced to quit in fourth round, when he broke hand in bout with Tommy Freeman, Hot Springs. Joe Peppers, Cleveland, outpointed K. O. Sweeney, Mingo Junction, six rounds. Al. Zelmer, Cleveland, won from Bobby Dudley, Toledo, six rounds. Harry Marcus, Cleveland, knocked out Young Irish, Akron, fourth round. Tommy Milton, Toledo, knocked out Lou Vida, Cleveland, third round.

Miss Ruth King's "Tip Top Revue" Wins Plaudits at Strand

Miss Ruth King and her "Tip Top Revue" scored another big hit in the musical comedy production, which was presented at the Strand theater last night and which will be repeated today.

Assisted by a cast of 15, Miss King offers a show that is a winner. Another complete change in the program will be made Friday and Saturday, the last two days of the week's engagement.

Among the vaudeville specialties presented last night were the Four Harmony boys in a series of vocal numbers. Miss King gives a dancing act. Chorus numbers were offered by a bevy of pretty girls. Colorful stage settings are used.

The motion picture, "Through the Dark," features Coleen Moore and other stars.

Two McCook Field Aviators Fly 190 Miles for Chrysler

Chrysler popularity among members of the army air service was further emphasized recently by the sale of two Chrysler Six coaches to Lieutenant R. G. Lockwood and C. E. Crumrine, of McCook Field, Dayton.

At the same time the possibilities of a new slogan, "I'd fly 190 miles for a Chrysler" were made apparent. Lieutenants Lockwood and Crumrine flew from Dayton to Detroit and drove their cars back overland.

Both are flyers of international reputation, Lieutenant Lockwood being the present world's record holder of the 1,000 kilometer speed flight, and Lieutenant Crumrine "advance man" on the late Round-the-World Flight, also project engineer for the coming Pulitzer races.

Correct weight can be yours

be shapely!

I DO NOT want to be thin! I just want to be my right weight! I want these hollows filled out. I just want enough firm, plump flesh on my bones to fill out my figure."

Of course you do. You want a figure that you can drape your clothes on—not just hang them on! What's the use of having pretty clothes, if they just hang on you?

And what would you say if you were told you could have the figure you want? A graceful, well rounded body—firm, solid flesh—just enough—just your right weight? You'd be mighty happy, wouldn't you?

Well, then, be happy—because you can have it! Put plenty of red cells in your blood and watch your weight go up to where you want it! That's what's the matter with you! Your blood is impoverished. You need more rich, red blood. S. S. S. is the thing to put red blood in your system. S. S. S. helps Nature build red blood cells by the millions.

You just try S. S. S. and watch how quickly you begin to fill out your clothes. Notice your skin clear of unsightly blemishes—your appetite increase—strength come to flabby muscles and vim and vigor fill your whole system. It's red blood that does it. And S. S. S. surely helps Nature build that red blood.

S. S. S. is sold by all drug stores. The larger bottle is more economical.
